

In-service Inspection

Inspection is a critical part of the maintenance program for any crane. It is the only way to ensure that the crane is in good working order and that it is safe to use. The inspection should be performed by a qualified person who is familiar with the crane and its components. The inspection should be performed at regular intervals, as specified in the manufacturer's instructions. The inspection should cover all parts of the crane, including the structure, the hoist, the trolley, the hook, and the controls. The inspection should also include a check of the crane's safety features, such as the emergency stop, the overload protection, and the anti-collision device. If any defects are found during the inspection, they should be repaired immediately. If the crane is found to be unsafe, it should be taken out of service until it is repaired.
