INTRODUCTION

Good ▲ (USP 1-Aug-2022) practices in a microbiology laboratory consist of activities that depend on several principles: aseptic technique, control of media, control of test strains, operation and control of equipment, diligent recording and evaluation of data, and training of the laboratory staff ▲in related competencies. ▲ (USP 1-Aug-2022) Because of the inherent risk of variability in microbiology data, reliability and reproducibility are dependent on the use of accepted methods and adherence to good ▲practices in the laboratory. This chapter does not cover the unique and specific laboratory activities for virology and mycoplasma recovery and detection. ▲ (USP 1-Aug-2022)

MEDIA PREPARATION AND QUALITY CONTROL

Media Preparation

Culture media are the basis for most microbiological tests. ▲Culture media may be either prepared in-house or obtained commercially. The term "prepared media" used in this chapter covers both these types of media. ▲ (USP 1-Aug-2022) Safeguarding the quality of the media is therefore critical to the success of the microbiology laboratory. Media preparation, proper storage, and quality control testing can ensure a consistent supply of high-quality media.

It is important to choose the correct media or components in making media based on the use of accepted sources or references for formulas. The manufacturer's formula and instructions for preparation routinely accompany dehydrated and ready-made media. Because different media types may have different preparation requirements (e.g., heating, additives, and pH adjustment), it is important to follow these instructions to ensure preparation of acceptable media quality. A certificate of analysis describing expiration dating and recommended storage conditions accompanies ready-made media, as well as the quality control organisms used in growth-promotion ▲testing, inhibitory and indicative property testing, as appropriate, and the results of performance testing with acceptance criteria for that media. For in-house prepared media, similar quality control criteria should be established. ▲ (USP 1-Aug-2022)
