

Chapter One

The first time Whitney kissed a boy, it felt like a giant wave swept over her. She felt such a rush she didn't know what to do or what to say. So she said nothing and just went along with it. She would never forget that day... It happened at an interschool athletics event on a Wednesday afternoon, late in February. Whitney was thirteen years old and in Grade 7. On Valentine's Day, she had received a card from Lucky, a real igatya lomfana a real hunk of a guy who was already in high school. Being sixteen years old, he had said he was in Grade 10, but she knew he was only in Grade 9, because her friend Lindiwe had an older sister named Zola, who was in the same class as Lucky. Whitney did not mind this little lie from Lucky. He was always quite secretive and that attracted her to him. She knew, for example, that his real name wasn't Lucky, but he refused to tell her what it was. Everyone just knew him as Lucky. So she just dreamt about what his real name might be and in her mind she made up some names that she liked. She liked him. She hadn't told him that she would never admit that to him but she liked him very much. She had never liked guys before, but in the last year something had changed inside of her. Maybe she was growing up. Or maybe it was because he liked her. He was clearly in love with her and that made her feel special and beautiful. Maybe she was pretty after all. One day she would be a beautiful woman and every man would want her. She had seen Lucky almost every day since Valentine's Day, on her way to and from school, when she walked past his school.

Twice he had asked her if he could walk her home, but she explained it would get her in trouble. Someone might see them and tell her mother, she speculated. Or worse, Mrs Pillay might see them. Mrs Pillay was Whitney's favourite teacher and she would never want to disappoint her. Whitney had not told Lucky that she was also a little nervous. Mother had warned her against being alone with boys. She had never explained why, but she was adamant that Whitney should not go somewhere alone with a guy. Whitney assumed that her mother wanted to protect her from tsotsis from guys who would do something bad to her. But Lucky was not like that he seemed to be friendly and funny and charming.

Yet the thought of being alone with Lucky both excited and scared her. She was somewhat nervous, but she longed to spend more time with him, longed to feel his arms around her.

The athletics day finally offered a chance for them to be together. It was held at the sports field of Lucky's high school, because Whitney's school, Thembaletu Primary, did not have the proper facilities. Their only sports field was a dusty piece of ground with rather skew, homemade goal posts at either end. The humble soccer field doubled as the playground during break times, so there was hardly a tuft of grass left on it. At Thembaletu High there was some grass on the field, at least, and two pavilions overlooking the field from both sides. School had ended early so the athletics could start at noon, and Lucky had arranged to meet her behind the main pavilion at two o' clock.

When she finally managed to slip away from her friends, he was already waiting for her. His face lit up when he saw her. "Yiz' apha come this way," he said in a hushed voice. "I want to show you my secret place!"
