American Television Nick Browne, 2013-07-18 This work brings together writings on television published in Quarterly Review of Film and Video from essays by Nick Browne and Beverle Houston to the latest historical and critical research It considers television's economics technologies forms and audiences from a cultural perspective that links history theory and criticism The authors address several key issues the formative period in American television history the relation between television's political economy and its cultural forms gender and melodrama and new technologies such as video games and camcorders Originally published in 1993

Living Room Lectures Nina C.

Leibman,2010-07-22 With a breadwinner dad a homemaker mom and squeaky clean kids the 1950s television family has achieved near mythological status as a model of what real families ought to be Yet feature films of the period often portrayed families in trouble with parents and children in conflict over appropriate values and behaviors Why were these representations of family apparently so far apart Nina Leibman analyzes many feature films and dozens of TV situation comedy episodes from 1954 to 1963 to find surprising commonalities in their representations of the family Redefining the comedy as a family melodrama she compares film and television depictions of familial power gender roles and economic attitudes Leibman s explorations reveal how themes of guilt deceit manipulation anxiety and disfunctionality that obviously characterize such movies as Rebel without a Cause A Summer Place and Splendor in the Grass also crop up in such TV shows as The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet Father Knows Best Leave It to Beaver The Donna Reed Show and My Three Sons Drawing on interviews with many of the participants of these productions archival documents and trade journals Leibman sets her discussion within a larger institutional history of 1950s film and television Her discussions shed new light not only on the reasons for both media s near obsession with family life but also on changes in American society as it reconfigured itself in the postwar era

Cross-media Promotion Jonathan Hardy,2010 Cross media promotion is one of the most salient characteristics in our modern media systems arising out of a context that involves virtually every level of media studies media ownership advertising and funding technological trends and regulatory issues the latter a specialty of the author of this book These factors often work together and Hardy is masterful in interweaving in an insightful but accessible way the complexity of media promotion From the Foreword by Matthew P McAllister Penn State University Book Jacket
