

Section 1

CONTROLS AND OPERATION

1. DESCRIPTION

The 1936 Ford Passenger Car is powered by a 100-horsepower, six-cylinder engine, or a 65-horsepower, four-cylinder engine. Model 80A is powered by the four-cylinder engine, and model 80B is powered by the six-cylinder engine. The transmission has three forward speeds and one in reverse. The car sits on a three-quarter floating axle. The car is equipped with safety glass throughout. The engine is also the main source of the car, and is located on the left side of the body near the engine left hand support. The engine is also located on top of the chassis housing, and is visible through a small opening in the floor. The service brakes at each of the four wheels are of the internal expansion type, hydraulically operated. The hand brake lever mechanically operates the brakes at the rear wheels.

2. DRIVER'S CONTROLS

a. Seat Adjustment (Fig. 2). The driver's seat is easily adjusted by pulling up on the seat adjustment lever and pushing the seat backward or forward as desired.

b. Window Controls and Door Handles. The venting windows are locked by a lock at the bottom of the window. To unlock the venting windows, press the latch button and turn the latch. On Super De Luxe models, the venting windows are opened or closed by a small handle below the bottom of the window. On De Luxe models, the venting windows are opened or closed by hand. Each door can be locked from the inside by simply lifting the door handle all the way up.

c. Brake Pedal (Fig. 3). Two shoe hydraulic brakes are provided at each of the four wheels and are operated by a conventional foot pedal located to the right of the steering column. Each time the brake pedal is depressed sufficiently to apply the brakes, a hydraulically operated switch on the rear of the hydraulic brake master cylinder completes the stop lamp circuit through the stop lamp bulbs located in the tail lamps.
