

2. The gear length is fixed at 5.85 mm (0.230"). Add or subtract the plus or minus marking of the gear wheel. Subtract from this sum the sum of the 'F' and 'G' measurements. The sum thus obtained denotes the thickness of the shim.

NOTE! On some gear housings for instance the figures 03 can be stamped or some other figure. In these cases add the number 5.00 to that of the 'F'-measurement and the figure 1.00 to that of the 'G'-measurement. Then the 'F'-measurement ends up being for instance 5.03 or some other measurement above 5 mm and the 'G'-measurement for instance 1.03 or some other measurement above 1.0 mm*.

If the sum obtained does not coincide with available shims, select the closest five – or ten – number. How to calculate the shim thickness can be seen in the following example:

|                                 |                |          |
|---------------------------------|----------------|----------|
| Measurement 'F'                 | 4.97 (0.195")  | stamped  |
| Measurement 'G'                 | +0.98 (0.039") | stamped  |
|                                 | 5.95 (0.234")  | 5.95     |
| Gear wheel                      | 5.85 (0.230")  | fixed    |
| Gear wheel marking              | +0.04 (0.002") | etched |
|                                 | 5.89 ....      | 5.89     |
| Calculated sum always positive! | 0.06 (0.002")  |          |

As per this example a 0.05 mm (0.002") shim is inserted between the propeller bearing box and the propeller thrust bearing. Carry on according to points 4–12 below!

* These measurements are examples.

** Only the figure 4 is etched on the gear wheel

Method 2

3. Insert the 0.2 mm (0.008") shim (1) in the propeller bearing housing. This is a value of experience.

4. Install the propeller shaft along with bearings in the gear housing. Be careful so that the bearing does not end up obliquely in the bearing housing or that the sealing rings are damaged. Make sure that the six holes in the washer coincide with the screws. Insert the nuts before the bearing is pushed home completely in the bearing box. Tighten the six nuts.
