Legislative Council,1904 Vortex Portable Mixer Peter Paker,2014-12-29 A vortex mixer or vortexer is a simple device used commonly in laboratories to mix small vials of liquid It consists of an electric motor with the drive shaft oriented vertically and attached to a cupped rubber piece mounted slightly off center. As the motor runs, the rubber piece oscillates rapidly in a circular motion. When a test tube or other appropriate container is pressed into the rubber cup or touched to its edge, the motion is transmitted to the liquid inside and a vortex is created. Most vortex mixers have variable speed settings and can be set to run continuously or to run only when downward pressure is applied to the rubber piece. This ebook by Peter Paker will give a brief explanation on vortex mixer. For more information, visit http://alkalisci.com/lab/equipment/vortex_mixers.html

Experimental and Theoretical Investigations of the Physical Processes Related to the Retention Capability of a Double Screen Element against Liquid Hydrogen in Earth's Gravity and in Microgravity with Respect to the Applied Stimuli André Pingel, 2022-08-04. Metal screens are commonly used as components for fluid handling in spacecraft and rocket tank designs. In most cases, the screens perform a passive separation of the propellant phases. The separation of the liquid from the gaseous propellant phase is a special challenge. Liquid gas phase separation means that the gaseous phase is allowed to enter a phase separation device while the liquid phase is blocked. The technical application of this process is the depressurization in a propellant tank. A certain amount of the gaseous propellant phase is vented from the tank through the gas port. The liquid propellant phase remains in the tank in order to be stored for the engine. However, if the tank causes a liquid movement during the depressurization, a part of the liquid can potentially enter the gas port. In order to prevent the unwanted liquid outflow, a separation of the liquid from the gas is necessary. This is possible with the aid of a double screen element and has already been performed for storable liquids in Earth's gravity and microgravity as well as for cryogenic liquids in Earth's gravity. At the current state of the art, the separation of the liquid from the gaseous phase of the cryogenic propellant hydrogen using a double screen element has not been performed in microgravity. However, with regard to a possible application, it is mandatory to investigate the function of the double screen element for the real propellant under relevant environmental conditions. In this work, a cryogenic test facility has been developed and operated successfully under Earth's gravity and microgravity conditions using the drop tower at the University of Bremen. Hereby, the original cryogenic propellant phases liquid and gaseous hydrogen have been used. The experiments show the appearance of the physical processes which are related to the retention capability of a double screen element against liquid hydrogen. Furthermore, these physical processes can obviously be influenced by an unknown boundary condition at the screens, the screen saturation. This unknown boundary condition in turn can obviously be influenced by a certain stimulus which causes a special fluid mechanical process. A simplified mathematical and two numerical models have been developed which combine the observed physical processes in the experiments. Two fitting parameters are introduced which influence the flow through screen pressure loss of the liquid and the gaseous hydrogen phase. After the fitting to experimental data, the two fitting parameters have been interpreted with respect to a possible screen saturation. The results lead to a prediction of the unknown boundary condition and indicate that a partial saturation of the screens with liquid could be present in each considered experiment

This can possibly lead to a major influence of the overall resistance of the double screen element against liquid hydrogen
