Methodological Quality of Interventions in Psychology Salvador Chacón-Moscó, Susana Sanduvete-Chaves, Jason C. Immekus, 2017-08-16 Evaluations of intervention programs seek to present high quality design measures and data to assess their merit and worth While evaluations differ in their purpose theoretical framework and methodology their collective aim is to obtain relevant and meaningful information to inform practice research and policy As such evaluation findings serve to build a body of knowledge on effective approaches to promote designated psychological outcomes critical to an individual's overall health and well being However as examined in this e book methodological weaknesses directly limit the potential of evaluations of intervention programs As discussed by Chacón-Moscó and Sanduvete-Chaves methodological weaknesses can be attributed to how to define and measure methodological quality and the contextual dependency of instruments designed to measure this quality In response this e book provides a collection of studies on methodological approaches to promote the quality of psychological interventions Specifically 10 original works published in the Research Topic Methodological Quality of Interventions in Psychology are included The papers are organized into two chapters Concretely Chapter 1 includes studies pertaining to methodological approaches to enhance the quality of psychological intervention being context independent solutions Furthermore Chapter 2 presents original work in different areas health education sport and social welfare where methodological quality has been better assessed Collectively the papers in this e book serve to expand the awareness of practitioners and researchers interested in psychological interventions of the critical role of methodological quality in this work This research was funded by the projects 1150096 Chilean National Fund of Scientific and Technological Development FONDECYT and PSI2015 71947 REDT Spain s Ministry of Economy and Competitiveness

Mechanisms underlying firing in healthy and sick human motoneurons Parveen N.S. Bawa,Maria Piotrkiewicz,Annie Schmied,2015-07-08 Since the latter half of the twentieth century an enormous amount of knowledge about mammalian motoneuron pools has been collected This progress was enabled mostly by the development of the precise techniques of intracellular recordings in acute animal experiments many of which were conducted under deep anaesthesia Recently obtained evidence indicates that anaesthetics used at that times changed certain properties of the cell membrane which might affect firing of the neuron Experiments on normal humans gets around this problem which lets one compare MN firing characteristics in humans and reduced preparations Firing pattern of human motoneurons is obtained indirectly by recording from a few muscle fibres of a motor unit Since there is one to one relationship between motor unit and motoneuron firing the statistical analysis of motor unit firing is equivalent to the analysis of motoneuron firing This analysis based on the essential knowledge about motoneuron physiology gained from the direct measurements in animal experiments and verified by computer simulations allows one to draw conclusions about the physiological properties of human motoneurons For obvious reasons the deductions made on properties of human motoneuron from these analyses should be accepted with caution On the other hand human experiments provide the unique opportunity to study intact motoneurons during normal physiological behavior Thus combining information obtained from animal and human experiments and computer simulations gives insight into underexplored problems of motor control This E book contains a collection of articles with range of exciting findings on the physiology and pathology of human motoneurons The collection covers such important issues concerning firing of healthy motoneurons as recruitment and rate coding as well as motoneuron excitability discusses intrinsic motoneuron properties disclosed by studying double discharges and provides information on broad spectrum of motoneuron pathology It is our hope that this collection promotes further expansion of knowledge on human motoneurons
