accelerated expectations of an increased role in addressing economic and societal challenges while at the same time putting pressure on available finances. Broader trends such as shifting student demographics and expectations, globalisation and mobility and new ways of working with business have contributed to these increased pressures. In the light of these trends there have been moves both from national or regional agencies and from individual institutions to respond by combining resources either through collaborative arrangements or more fundamentally through mergers between two or more universities. After an introductory chapter by the editors which establishes the context for mergers and alliances the book falls into two main parts. Part 1 takes a national or regional perspective to give some sense of the historical context, the wider drivers and the importance of these developments in these cases. Included are both systemic accounts for countries as France, Sweden, Romania, Russia, Wales and England and specific cross-cutting initiatives including a major facility at Magurele in Romania and a Spanish programme for promoting international campuses of excellence. Part 2 is built from specific cases of universities either in mergers or alliances with examples from different countries such as France, UK, Romania, Spain, Germany, Denmark, Finland, Switzerland. A concluding chapter by the editors assesses these experiences and indicates the implications and future needs for understanding in this domain.

Decolonisation after Democracy Laurence Piper, 2020-05-21 Decolonisation after Democracy addresses the provocative idea that we need to rid higher education of lingering forms of colonial knowledge. This matters because in the colonial era much knowledge was put to the service of subjugating indigenous peoples and the assumptions from this era may linger into the present. Examples of deep-rooted and foundational forms of knowledge that carry colonial traits are normative binaries such as civilised and backward, modern and traditional, and rational and superstitious. In addition, some accounts of positive values like freedom, equality, justice and democracy may hide the assumption that the western experience is the norm from which other kinds are rendered imitations, deviations or pathologies. In this collection, some of South Africa's leading political scientists and academics engage with the challenge of decolonising knowledge in the research and teaching of politics. It includes new insights about the state, international relations, clientelism, state-society relations and land reform and introduces new ways to engage the colonial library, curriculum reform and the marginality of historically black institutions. Finally, the contributors deal with the decolonial challenge posed by the Fees Must Fall student movements reflecting on issues of revolutionary politics and gender and sexual violence. This book was originally published as a special issue of Politikon.
