

A Sound of Thunder

INTRODUCTION

BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF Ray Bradbury

Bradbury spent his childhood in Chicago. After the family moved west from Los Angeles to Santa Monica, California, in 1930, a school teacher, Bradbury's mother, encouraged him to write. At the age of 15, after finishing high school, Bradbury moved into literary journalism, and he continued his reading in the public library. He worked in bookstores, and he started writing poetry. He published his first story, "The Foghorn," in 1940, just before the United States entered World War II. Bradbury was not affected by the war; instead, he managed to continue what he was doing. He read Macmillan's Encyclopedia of Science Fiction, which came out in 1947. That was about the time "Science Fiction" quickly changed into what the world called "Ray Bradbury." Bradbury published his first novel, Invitation of a Summer Night, in 1948. The book, which was incredibly well received, gave the new science fiction movement its momentum. Bradbury also wrote science fiction and nonfiction about the future, including his two works, The Martian Chronicles and Earthlight. Later, Bradbury repeatedly wrote about the future, always in a positive way. Bradbury believed that with our minds, we could save the world and the future. He used some of the great SF, science fiction, and fantasy authors as models.

HISTORICAL CONTEXT

"A Sound of Thunder" was written shortly after Bradbury's participation in World War II, a common theme in Bradbury's science fiction work. The novel Earthlight, from 1948, is a story about the war and the separation of the combined forces and the possibility of human war. While it does not deal directly with the war, "A Sound of Thunder" does explore the fear of what new technology may mean for our future.

RELATED LITERARY WORKS

There were a number of popular science fiction authors at the time. One of the best known was Isaac Asimov's "The Last Question," which was published in 1956, and it dealt with a robot who knew how to think. Arthur C. Clarke's 1955 story "Earthlight" also dealt with the war and the possibility of human war. Bradbury's science fiction work was not just about the future, but it was also about the past. Bradbury's science fiction work was not just about the future, but it was also about the past. Bradbury's science fiction work was not just about the future, but it was also about the past.

Several short stories, including "The Sound of Thunder," were published in Bradbury's Collected Stories in 1952, as well as a collection of Bradbury's Best Stories in 1953, and another in 1954.

Bradbury's science fiction work was not just about the future, but it was also about the past. Bradbury's science fiction work was not just about the future, but it was also about the past. Bradbury's science fiction work was not just about the future, but it was also about the past.
