Proceedings: Innovation and Integration - Science, Technology and Policy in the Built Environment Mahtab Akhavan Farshchi, 2012 Europa Giuseppe Casale, 2002 Young People, Social Capital and Ethnic Identity Tracey Reynolds, 2013-10-18 Social capital and ethnicity are crucial to young people's understandings of their social world. The strong bonding networks often assumed in ethnic groups suggest that individuals may prefer to be bonded to each other according to shared socio-cultural factors such as shared histories, memories, language, customs, traditions, and values. However, bridging forms of social capital allow new understandings of ethnic identities to emerge and which involve dynamic and complex social processes that are continually changing and evolving according to time, location, and context. This book explores the ways in which the concepts of social capital and ethnicity play a central role in young people's relationships, participation in wider social networks, and the construction of identities. Researchers and scholars working in the fields of children and youth studies, education, families, social and racial and ethnic studies offer differing accounts of the ways in which social capital operates in young people's lives across diverse social settings and ethnic groups. This edited book is timely and significant given the public interest of researchers, academics, politicians, and policymakers working in areas of youth and community work, race relations, and cultural diversity. This book was published as a special issue of Ethnic and Racial Studies. Research Into Practice 2/E Abbott, Pamela, Sapsford, Roger, 1997-03-01 Praise for the first edition of Research Into Practice and Research Methods for Nurses and the Caring Professions. These books provide a good introduction for the uninitiated to reading and doing research. Abbott and Sapsford provide a clearly written and accessible introduction to social research. One of their aims is to demystify research and in this they succeed admirably. After reading the text and the articles in the reader and working through the various research exercises, readers should have a clear appreciation of how to evaluate other people's research and how to begin their own. David Field Journal of Palliative Medicine. This is a thoroughly revised and up-to-date edition of the bestselling reader for nurses and the caring professions. It offers carefully selected examples of research all concerned in some way with nursing or the study of health and community care. It illustrates the kind of research that can be done by a small team or a single researcher without large-scale research grants. The editors have chosen papers which show a great diversity of approaches, differing in emphasis on description or explanation, different degrees of structure in design, and different appeals to the authority of science or the authenticity of empathic exploration. They show the limitations typical of small-scale projects carried out with limited resources and the experience of applied research as it occurs in practice as opposed to how it tends to look when discussed in textbooks. The chapters have been organized into three sections representing three distinct types of social science research: observing and participating, talking to people and asking questions, and controlled trials and comparisons. Each section is provided with an

Beyond open access: visions for open evaluation of scientific papers by post-publication peer review Nikolaus Kriesgeskorte, Diana Deca, A scientific publication system needs to provide two basic services access and evaluation The traditional publication system restricts the access to papers by requiring payment and it restricts the evaluation of papers by relying on just 2 4 pre publication peer reviews and by keeping the reviews secret As a result the current system suffers from a lack of quality and transparency of the peer review evaluation process and the only immediately available indication of a new paper s quality is the prestige of the journal it appeared in Open access is now widely accepted as desirable and is slowly beginning to become a reality However the second essential element evaluation has received less attention Open evaluation an ongoing post publication process of transparent peer review and rating of papers promises to address the problems of the current system However it is unclear how exactly such a system should be designed The evaluation system steers the attention of the scientific community and thus the very course of science For better or worse the most visible papers determine the direction of each field and guide funding and public policy decisions Evaluation therefore is at the heart of the entire endeavor of science As the number of scientific publications explodes evaluation and selection will only gain importance A grand challenge of our time therefore is to design the future system by which we evaluate papers and decide which ones deserve broad attention So far scientists have left the design of the evaluation process to journals and publishing companies However the steering mechanism of science should be designed by scientists The cognitive computational and brain sciences are best prepared to take on this task which will involve social and psychological considerations software design and modeling of the network of scientific papers and their interrelationships This Research Topic in Frontiers in Computational Neuroscience collects visions for a future system of open evaluation Because critical arguments about the current system abound these papers will focus on constructive ideas and comprehensive designs for open evaluation systems Design decisions include Should the reviews and ratings be entirely transparent or should some aspects be kept secret Should other information such as paper downloads be included in the evaluation How can scientific objectivity be strengthened and political motivations weakened in the future system Should the system include signed and authenticated reviews and ratings Should the evaluation be an ongoing process such that promising papers are more deeply evaluated How can we bring science and statistics to the evaluation process e g should rating averages come with error bars How should the evaluative information about each paper e g peer ratings be combined to prioritize the literature Should different individuals and organizations be able to define their own evaluation formulae e g weighting ratings according to different criteria How can we efficiently transition toward the future system Ideally the future system will derive its authority from a scientific literature on community based open evaluation We hope that these papers will provide a starting point
