The Horror from the Mound Robert E. Howard, 2014-11-11 There is a secret held inside an Indian burial mound only a few know the secret and they have been sworn to secrecy until someone became greedy deciding that there must be treasure hidden in the mound

The Horror from the Mound Robert Howard, 2020-05-26 This early work by Robert E Howard was originally published in the 1932 and we are now republishing it with a brand new introductory biography The Horror from the Mound is one of Howard's stories in the weird west genre a combination of a western and a horror or fantasy Robert Ervin Howard was born in Peaster Texas in 1906 During his youth his family moved between a variety of Texan boomtowns and Howard a bookish and somewhat introverted child was steeped in the violent myths and legends of the Old South At fifteen Howard began to read the pulp magazines of the day and to write more seriously The December 1922 issue of his high school newspaper featured two of his stories Golden Hope Christmas and West is West In 1924 he sold his first piece a short caveman tale titled Spear and Fang for 16 to the not yet famous Weird Tales magazine Howard's most famous character Conan the Cimmerian was a barbarian turned King during the Hyborian Age a mythical period of some 12 000 years ago Conan featured in seventeen Weird Tales stories between 1933 and 1936 which is why Howard is now regarded as having spawned the sword and sorcery genre The Conan stories have since been adapted many times most famously in the series of films starring Arnold Schwarzenegger

STEVE BRILL did not believe in ghosts or demons Juan Lopez did But neither the caution of the one nor the sturdy skepticism of the other was shield against the horror that fell upon them the horror forgotten by men for more than three hundred years a screaming fear monstrously resurrected from the black lost ages Yet as Steve Brill sat on his sagging stoop that last evening his thoughts were as far from uncanny menaces as the thoughts of man can be His ruminations were bitter but materialistic He surveyed his farmland and he swore Brill was tall rangy and tough as boot leather true son of the iron bodied pioneers who wrenched West Texas from the wilderness He was browned by the sun and strong as a longhorned steer His lean legs and the boots on them showed his cowboy instincts and now he cursed himself that he had ever climbed off the hurricane deck of his crankeyed mustang and turned to farming He was no farmer the young puncher admitted profanely Yet his failure had not all been his fault Plentiful rain in the winter so rare in West Texas had given promise of good crops But as usual things had happened A late blizzard had destroyed all the budding fruit The grain which had looked so promising was ripped to shreds and battered into the ground by terrific hailstorms just as it was turning yellow A period of intense dryness followed by another hailstorm finished the corn Then the cotton which had somehow struggled through fell before a swarm of grasshoppers which stripped Brill's field almost overnight So Brill sat and swore that he would not renew his lease he gave fervent thanks that he did not own the land on which he had wasted his sweat and that there were still broad rolling ranges to the West where a strong young man could make his living riding and roping Now as Brill sat glumly he was aware of the approaching form of his nearest neighbor Juan Lopez a taciturn old

Mexican who lived in a but just out of sight over the hill across the creek and grubbed for a living At present he was clearing a strip of land on an adjoining farm and in returning to his but he crossed a corner of Brill s pasture
