Climate change is expected to reduce crop yields in many regions, particularly in the tropics. This could lead to food shortages and increased food prices, which could have a negative impact on the world's poor.
3. Climate change is also expected to increase the frequency and intensity of extreme weather events, such as hurricanes, droughts, and floods. These events could damage infrastructure and disrupt the food supply.
4. Climate change is also expected to increase the spread of diseases, particularly those that are carried by insects. This could have a negative impact on the world's food supply.
5. Climate change is also expected to increase the demand for water. As temperatures rise, evaporation rates will increase, leading to a decrease in water availability. This could have a negative impact on the world's food supply.
