By 1938, Joseph Stalin, to a great extent, converted Russia from a backwards agricultural state to one of the most advanced industrial states in the world. As opposed to Lenin, who adapted Marxist ideas in order to recover the economy after the conflicts of the revolution, Stalin was more rigid and was able to transform Russia from an agrarian society to an industrial (and military) superpower. Stalin abandoned the New Economic Policy (NEP) and made use of a series of Five Year Plans which placed emphasis on the ideas of collectivisation and industrialisation. Stalin had a highly centralised system of government and economic control. (His "cult personality"). His use of terror and propaganda to control the nation which further contributed towards Russia's radical transformation. This essay aims to explore how the points mentioned above changed Russia from a backwards agricultural state to an industrial superpower.

Stalin Russia 19to 1940 Essay:

The Art and Science of Making the New Man in Early 20th-Century Russia Yvonne Howell, Nikolai Kremmentsov, 2021-12-02 The idea that morally mentally and physically superior new men might replace the currently existing mankind has periodically seized the imagination of intellectuals leaders and reformers throughout history This volume offers a multidisciplinary investigation into how the new man was made in Russia and the early Soviet Union in the first third of the 20th century The traditional narrative of the Soviet new man as a creature forged by propaganda is challenged by the strikingly new and varied case studies presented here The book focuses on the interplay between the rapidly developing experimental life sciences such as biology medicine and psychology and countless cultural products ranging from film and fiction dolls and museum exhibits to pedagogical projects sculptures and exemplary agricultural fairs With contributions from scholars based in the United States Canada the UK Germany and Russia the picture that emerges is emphatically more complex contradictory and suggestive of strong parallels with other new man visions in Europe and elsewhere In contrast to previous interpretations that focused largely on the apparent disconnect between utopian new man rhetoric and the harsh realities of everyday life in the Soviet Union this volume brings to light the surprising historical trajectories of new man visions their often obscure origins acclaimed and forgotten champions unexpected and complicated results and mutual interrelations In short the volume is a timely examination of a recurring theme in modern history when dramatic advancements in science and technology conjoin with anxieties about the future to fuel dreams of a new and improved mankind
