Hooking Students into Learning Patricia Hipwell, 2018-07-20 Best selling author of the How to write what you want to say series Patricia Hipwell has completed her magnum opus which will benefit all teachers from Year 4 Year 12 This book has been written to provide teachers with ways of hooking students into learning at the start of each and every lesson It contains almost 300 ways of doing this The book is designed to be used by teachers in all curriculum areas from Year 4 upwards It contains a plethora of ideas that can be adapted to any curriculum area In the book the term relevant or subject specific content is used a great deal This is because skills are always best developed in the context of use with content that is relevant to current areas of study There is little point for example in asking students to do an activity that develops their sentence writing skills using information on Ancient Greece when they are currently studying the Black Death The symbiotic relationship between content and skills means that teachers often have to develop their own resources because this enables them to focus on the skills using relevant and current content Various referred to as anticipatory sets warm ups lesson starters or hooks the activities in this book are excellent ways to switch students on to their learning In this book the activities will be referred to as lesson starters Their purposes include moving key facts and figures from short term to long term memory activating prior knowledge about a topic where prior knowledge exists awakening interest in the topic of the lesson checking for understanding improving a variety of skills developing learning strategies improving vocabulary developing collaborative learning strategies Most of these activities are designed to take between five and ten minutes at the start of the lesson Students may take longer until they become familiar with them especially if the activities are different from current learning activities Many of the activities will work best if students work in pairs or small groups Some activities can generate noise and therefore be unsettling so teachers will need to be mindful of this when choosing a particular activity They may prefer to do the activity at the end rather than the start of a lesson In this case the purpose of the activity is to consolidate the learning of the lesson The focus of many of the activities is to increase the amount of reading and writing we require students to do Also students need to develop their vocabulary in all areas of the curriculum and many of the activities have been developed with this in mind

A clear and accessible framework to accelerate your organization's gender diversity equity and inclusion efforts in relation to the career development of Black women. Why are gender equality initiatives not helping all women equally? Why does there continue to be a lack of Black women in senior management and leadership? How can the mindsets and strategies of companies whose approach is to focus on gender first and only then to look at race be changed to become more intersectional and inclusive? Closing the Gap serves to contextualize how companies unintentionally position Black women in situations where they cannot thrive or reach their full potential. It also shines a light on some of the subversive behaviours which further create tension in employer-employee relations such as the absence of a process to highlight issues without repercussions, whether overt or subtle. This exacerbates the one thing most companies are trying to prevent: Black women resigning, taking their unique skillset and experience with them. There hasn't been an explicit guide to understanding these invisible barriers and exactly how they can be recognised, understood and overcome until now. In Closing the Gap, gender equity leader Leanne Mair focusses on how companies can accelerate their gender diversity equity and inclusion efforts by identifying the blind spots that can often prevent Black women from reaching their full potential in the workplace. It provides a practical and accessible framework detailing the current landscape, highlighting the key challenges and remedies and bringing organisations closer to their goals of an inclusive and equitable culture. Kulik,Elissa L. Perry,2023-05-02 Human Resources for the Non HR Manager gives every manager regardless of their functional role access to cutting edge research and evidence based recommendations so they can approach their people management responsibilities with confidence Day to day people management is increasingly the responsibility of front line managers not HR professionals But managers are often poorly prepared for these responsibilities they receive little training and sometimes have little interest in HR People management is never easy and it is particularly challenging in COVID 19 s next normal workplace where managers must engage diverse employees across a wide range of working arrangements This book focuses on the special relationship that line managers have with their employees and describes managers responsibilities across the entire employee lifecycle from front end recruiting and hiring through to long term retention The content is grounded in rigorous academic research but the book s conversational tone conveys basic principles without technical jargon Each chapter includes Manager s Checkpoints to help readers apply the material to their own workplace and Manager's Knots that address gray areas inherent in people management. The book is designed for any reader currently working as a line manager or aspiring to a managerial role who wants to improve their people management skills. Combined with a complete instructor package, the book provides different types of activities to accompany each chapter. Some Assembly Required: In the News and Undercover Manager. The activities can be found in the Instructor Resources Download Hub and are designed to align with student cohorts with varying levels of experience.
