Sea Power in Its Relations to the War of 1812 Alfred Thayer Mahan, 1968. Excerpt: "I would join heartily in a war. They would not, however, go to war to contest the right of Great Britain to search American vessels for British seamen; for it was the general opinion with them that if American seamen were encouraged, there would be no need for the employment of foreign seamen." 280 Quincy therefore condemned the retaliatory temper of the Administration as shown in the Chesapeake incident by the proclamation excluding British ships of war and in the embargo as a reply to the Orders in Council. The oppression of American trade culminating in the Orders was a just cause of war, but war was not expedient before a further attempt at negotiation favored by a withdrawal of all retaliatory acts. He was willing to concede the exercise of British authority on board American merchantmen on the high seas. In the main, these were the coincident opinions of Monroe, although a Virginian and identified with the opposite party. At this time he wrote to Jefferson privately urging a special mission for which he offered his services. Our affairs are evidently at a pause, and the next step to be taken without an unexpected change seems likely to be the commencement of war with both France and Great Britain, unless some expedient consistent with the honor of the Government and Country is adopted to prevent it. To Jefferson's rejection of the proposition, he replied: "I have not the hope you seem still to entertain that our differences with either Power will be accommodated under existing arrangements. The embargo was not likely to accomplish the desired effect if it did not produce it under the first impression. Without evidence of firm and strong union at home, nothing favorable to us can be expected abroad, and from the symptoms in the Eastern states, there is much cause to fear that tranquillity cannot be secured at present by adherence only to the measures which have heretofore been pursued." 281 Monroe had already 282 expressed the

The Monroe Doctrine and United States National Security in the Early Twentieth Century Alex Bryne, 2020-05-19 This book demonstrates that during the early twentieth century the Monroe Doctrine served the role of a national security framework that justified new directions in United States foreign relations when the nation emerged as one of the world's leading imperial powers As the United States overseas empire expanded in the wake of the Spanish American War the nation's decision makers engaged in a protracted debate over the meaning and application of the doctrine aligning it to two antithetical core values simultaneously regional hegemony in the Western Hemisphere on the one hand and Pan Americanism on the other The doctrine's fractured meaning reflected the divisions that existed among domestic perceptions of the nation's new role on the world stage and directed the nation's approach to key historical events such as the acquisition of the Philippines the Mexican Revolution the construction of the Panama Canal the First World War and the debate over the League of Nations
