The Intimate Supply Chain David Frederick Ross, 2008-06-09 The growing power being exercised by today's consumer is causing significant paradigm shifts away from traditional marketing. This is leading to a whole new take on the structure and functioning of supply chain management (SCM). It's no longer so much about improving the manufacturing process as it is improving the point and speed of contact and the relationship with the customer.

Towards a Knowledge-based Economy Seiichi Masuyama, Donna Vandenberg, 2003-01-21 The evolution of the information and communications technology (ICT) paradigm is shifting the basis for economic activity from material and labour inputs to knowledge and information inputs, spawning the knowledge-based economy. In East Asia, it is evident that the emergence of the knowledge-based economy is disrupting the 'flying geese' pattern of development and creating a new industrial geography. This book gives a picture of the shifting industrial geography in the region based on accounts of the status of the knowledge-based economy in ten individual East Asian economies. For some economies, the increased production of ICT equipment and services is the pathway to the knowledge-based economy and even to leapfrogging ahead of more advanced economies. Other economies are focused on putting in place the physical and institutional infrastructure to connect to electronic networks and avoid the digital divide. For yet others, the emergence of the knowledge-based economy is expanding their role in the region, adding the role of ICT hub.

Value Addition of Horticultural Crops: Recent Trends and Future Directions Amit Baran Sharangi, Suchand Datta, 2015-02-27 This book combines several ideas and philosophies and provides a detailed discussion on the value addition of fruits, vegetables, spices, plantation crops, floricultural crops and in forestry. Separate chapters address the packaging, preservation, drying, dehydration, total quality management and supply chain management of horticultural crops. The book explains value addition as a process of increasing the economic value and consumer appeal of a commodity with special reference to horticultural crops. Each chapter focuses on a specific area, exploring value addition as a production/marketing strategy driven by customer needs and preferences. But as such, it is also a more creative field, calling for more imagination than calculated routine work. Value is added to the particular produce item when the product is still available when the season is out and the demand for the product exceeds the available supply. Value addition is an important factor in the growth and development of the horticultural sector both in India and around the world. But very little information is available on this particular aspect of horticulture. Albert Einstein famously said, 'Try not to become a man of success but rather try to become a man of value.' This message is not only true for those people who want to make more of themselves but also for those who want their creation or product in any form to excel. And it certainly applies to horticultural crops which are extremely perishable. It is true that loss reduction is normally less costly than equivalent increases in production. The loss of fresh produce can be minimized by adopting different processing and preservation techniques to convert the fresh vegetables into suitable value-added and diversified products which will help to reduce the market glut during harvest season. Value-added processed products are products that can be obtained from main products and by products after some sort of processing and subsequently marketed for an increased profit margin. Generally speaking value added products indicate that for the same volume of primary products a higher price is achieved by means of processing, packing, enhancing the quality or other such methods. The integrated approach from harvesting to the delivery into the hands of the consumer if handled properly can add value to fresh produce on the market. But most of the fresh produce has a limited life although it can be stored at appropriate temperature and relative humidity for the same time. If such produce is processed just after harvesting it adds value and stabilizes the processed products for a longer time. Preparing processed products will provide more variety to consumers and improve the taste and other sensory properties of food. This will also promote their fortification with nutrients that are lacking in fresh produce. By adopting suitable methods for processing and value addition the shelf life of fresh produce can be increased manifold which supports their availability year round to a wider spectrum of consumers on both the domestic and international market. With increased urbanization, rising middle class purchasing power, changing food habits and a decline in making preserved products in individual homes, there is now a higher demand for industry made products on the domestic market. In spite of all these aspects only 12.2% of the total produce is processed in developing countries as compared to 40.83% in developed countries. The horticultural export industry offers an important source of employment for developing countries. For instance, horticulture accounts for 30% of India's agricultural GDP from 8.5% of cropped area. India is the primary producer of spices, second largest producer of fruits and vegetables and holds a prominent position with regard to most plantation crops in the world. The cultivation of horticultural crops is substantially more labor intensive than growing cereal crops and offers more post harvest opportunities for the development of value added products. This book offers a valuable guide for students of horticulture as well as a comprehensive resource for educators, scientists, industrial personnel, amateur growers and farmers.

Integrating Seaports and Trade Corridors Robert J. McCalla, Brian Slack, 2016-05-23. Seaport gateways and the corridors which connect them to widely dispersed hinterlands are of vital and essential importance to international trade and the world economy. Distributing goods to ultimate land destinations or bringing the goods to seaports from inland origins is organizationally complex involving multiple actors. This book furthers understanding about how this movement is organized, the role of ports acting as gateways and the actions of corridor players. A key question that confronts the shipping and port industries as well as public authorities is how to increase the benefits of maritime trade to the companies and institutions directly involved as well as the port city regions where the transfers take place. This question is being posed in the midst of a global economic recession and trade downturn and in the context of contemporary policy frameworks whose goals are to generate economic benefits and efficiencies rather than to maximize traffic volumes. This book puts into perspective the reality, opportunities and challenges facing seaport gateways and corridors now and in the future.
