

PAPER 6 – Combined science

Suggest the average length of the three beams is used instead of measuring the length of just one beam: Can identify anomalies that all beams the same.

Suggest a different measurement the student could take for comparing the size of beams: Mass or volume.

When stating a conclusion for a test mention all the experiments, for example, Beam A contains starch AND Beam B. Don't just mention Beam A and stop.

Suggest how the experiment could be changed so that the highest temperatures reached can be compared more reliably: Repeat the experiment twice for accuracy, use the same initial temperature for all the experiments, along with same mass or amount/ size of the metal.

To find a suitable scale to use on a graph, take both the maximum and minimum values and subtract them, put a bracket, then divide them by the number of large squares you have on your grid. Afterwards, take your answer and multiply it by 2. Now you have 2 values, between them is a range and you have to pick the number between them that is divisible by 10. For example, the values 1 and 4.2, a suitable scale between them is 2.5.

Both hydrogen carbonate and limewater are tests that are specific for identifying carbon dioxide.

Describe one technique for measuring a person's rate: Count pulse in 60 seconds, or use a pulse meter/ smart watch.

Make the position of test tube D: Used as a controlled variable, or to make sure that the jelly responsible for the results.

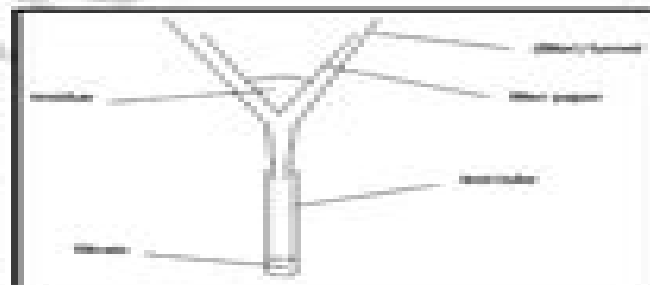

Explain why the test substance is added in the water bath: To make the temperature constant.

Explain the purpose of using water instead of paraffin in beaker B: As a control, to compare to make paraffin is responsible for the results.

The reaction finishes when the reactants are used up, which is why the rate of the reaction is indicated as a constant value for the remaining of the time.

Assuming that your measuring cylinder is dry when taking volume measurements: Read against the bottom of your measurement's values.

Suggest why it is better to use the change in temperature to compare the heat loss rather than the final temperature: The starting temperatures are not the same.
