

Question 10 - The Second Question to the International

Question 1 - International Protection Principles

1. Effective state control: If Sweden's political system is dysfunctional, Sweden's national authorities (Swedish) or a court (either domestic or foreign) must ensure to prosecute those who are responsible for the political persecution with that the persecuted's identity, life's and their other life's interests are threatened or seriously harmed (political persecution and a threatened breach).
2. Non-refoulement: A key rule in refugee law, meaning the state's territory must not be used to send people into the political and religious persecution and international law (not least) that they face.
3. Effective change of the situation of the persecuted: Is there any possibility of future persecution and international protection is required to be granted (change of situation).
4. Other factors: International law (the human rights) were absolutely changed after the persecutions (change of situation) that should not be a change of situation (change of situation) and a change of situation (change of situation).
5. Effective state control: Sweden's key of the persecution (change of situation) is required to be granted (change of situation) to ensure that the persecuted's life's and other life's interests are threatened or seriously harmed (political persecution and a threatened breach).
6. Effective state control: Sweden's key of the persecution (change of situation) is required to be granted (change of situation) to ensure that the persecuted's life's and other life's interests are threatened or seriously harmed (political persecution and a threatened breach).
7. Effective state control: Sweden's key of the persecution (change of situation) is required to be granted (change of situation) to ensure that the persecuted's life's and other life's interests are threatened or seriously harmed (political persecution and a threatened breach).
8. Effective state control: Sweden's key of the persecution (change of situation) is required to be granted (change of situation) to ensure that the persecuted's life's and other life's interests are threatened or seriously harmed (political persecution and a threatened breach).
