

UNDERSTANDING DIABETES

What Is Diabetes?
 Diabetes is a chronic condition that affects the way your body uses blood sugar (glucose). Blood sugar is the main source of energy for your cells. In people with diabetes, the pancreas either doesn't produce enough insulin or the body's cells don't respond properly to the insulin that is produced. Insulin is a hormone that acts like a key to let glucose enter your cells. Without enough insulin or without the right kind of insulin, glucose can't get into your cells to be used for energy. This can lead to a buildup of glucose in the blood, which can cause serious complications over time.

Type 1 Diabetes
 Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease in which the body's immune system attacks and destroys the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. It usually develops in childhood or young adulthood and requires lifelong insulin therapy.

Type 2 Diabetes
 Type 2 diabetes is the most common form of diabetes. It is characterized by insulin resistance, where the body's cells don't respond properly to insulin, and by a relative deficiency of insulin. It is often associated with obesity, high blood pressure, and high cholesterol.

Potential Complications of Diabetes:

Stroke

Eye Disease

Heart Disease

Kidney Disease

Foot Ulcers

What Are the Symptoms of Diabetes?
 The most common symptoms of diabetes are increased thirst, increased hunger, increased urination, and unexplained weight loss. Other symptoms include fatigue, blurred vision, and slow-healing sores.

How Is Diabetes Diagnosed?
 Diabetes is diagnosed through blood tests that measure blood sugar levels. The most common tests are the fasting plasma glucose test, the oral glucose tolerance test, and the hemoglobin A1c test.

What Are the Long-Term Risks of Diabetes?
 Long-term risks of diabetes include heart disease, stroke, kidney disease, eye disease, and foot ulcers. These complications can lead to serious health problems and even death if not managed properly.
