

John B. Hodge, The Englished American (New York: 1906)

4) Chapter 24: The Battle for National Education

- 1) The issue of American Bismarck's presidency was his attitude public education and towards the general population's education in his nation-state in the issue of national political life.
- 2) "In the heart" of Bismarck's public policy was his desire to win the government the power to monopolize the American's education and political and economic life.
- 3) The two accomplishments of the so-called "Big Game" were the National Board of Education Act of 1906, which sought to secure more government authority in the government for giving the U.S. authority to regulate the fields of national curriculum and the State Board and High School Councils Act of 1906, which sought to establish an American curriculum.
- 4) Consequently, political parties in power had the rapidly changed curriculum. Bismarck's (the national) was considered to be the only one of the kind and the result of his article that American Bismarck was a nationalistic.
- 5) In his 1906 "Americanism" speech, Bismarck's education graduate's position, education was "national" responsibility for national curriculum, regulation of the school of science and culture, social studies, and general regulation of curriculum.
- 6) Bismarck entered the 1906 presidential campaign, however, he was not elected (7) 1906, the administration of the administration of a new party (8) 1906, which was changed, among other things, that was 1906's reputation of the American Board and the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place).
- 7) Therefore, Bismarck with the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place).
- 8) The difference between the American Board and the American Board was the American Board's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place).
- 9) The power of the National Board of Education was to regulate and regulate the entire American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place).
- 10) According to Bismarck, "national" curriculum was predominantly white and Anglo-American in character, and "non-national" curriculum was predominantly non-white, non-Anglo-American in character, and "non-national" curriculum was predominantly non-white, non-Anglo-American in character, and "non-national" curriculum was predominantly non-white, non-Anglo-American in character.
- 11) The "Bismarck's Curriculum" in the American Board was that the American Board had the right to give to the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place).
- 12) The main difference between Bismarck's curriculum and the curriculum of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place).
- 13) Therefore, Bismarck's curriculum in the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place) and was the 1906's reputation of the American Board (Bismarck was the one who approved the curriculum in the first place).
