The oxide of J functions as a catalyst in the decomposition of hydrogen peroxide. Hence, J is most likely a transition metal. The answer is C, in which J is manganese.

26. A

Option A is not relevant in the construction of aircraft. Magnalium is used because of its low density, high strength and resistance to corrosion.

27. B

Group I metals are very reactive and form very stable ores. Hence, electrolysis must be used on its molten ore in order to provide sufficient energy to separate the ions in order to extract rubidium.

28. C

Carbon dioxide cannot be further oxidized because the oxidation state of carbon is already +4. Carbon monoxide (oxidation state of carbon in CO is +2) can be further oxidized to carbon dioxide while unburnt petrol gases can be further oxidized to carbon dioxide as well.

29. A

Sulfuric acid reacts with solid calcium carbonate to form calcium sulfate which is insoluble in water. If a large lump of calcium carbonate is used, a layer of insoluble calcium sulfate is formed quickly and this prevents the sulfuric acid from coming into contact with calcium carbonate. Hence, the reaction will soon stop.

30. C

Nitrogen oxide is reduced to form nitrogen gas in the catalytic converter. Option A is wrong because carbon monoxide is oxidized to form carbon dioxide (not reduction). Nitrogen dioxide and sulfur dioxide are acidic gases. The reaction with calcium carbonate is not a redox reaction.

Extinction Learning from a Mechanistic and Systems

Perspective Denise Manahan-Vaughan, Onur Gunturkun, Oliver T. Wolf, 2016-08-08 Throughout their lifetime animals learn to associate stimuli with their consequences Following memory acquisition and consolidation circumstances may arise that necessitate that initially learned behaviour is no longer relevant The ensuing process is called extinction learning and involves a novel and complex learning procedure that involves a large number of neural entities While the neural fundamentals of the initial acquisition are well studied our understanding of the behavioural and neural basis of extinction is still limited and derives mostly from rodent data acquired through fear conditioning paradigms Fear conditioning and extinction in rodents is a spectacularly successful paradigm within behavioral neuroscience However in recent years new approaches have been emerging that examine the mechanisms of extinction learning in different setting that also involve appetitive models a broader comparative perspective a focus on other brain systems an examination of hormonal factors and conditioning of immune responses Only a broader analysis of the neural fundamentals of extinction learning will finally uncover shared and distinct mechanisms that underlie extinction learning in different functional systems The papers compiled in this Research Topic offer new and valuable insights into the mechanisms and functional implementation of extinction learning at its different levels of complexity and form the basis for new concepts and research ideas in this field between the sleaziness of Harvey Weinstein's business meetings and the passionless doctrine of neoclassical economics. In this witty and incisive examination of the new economy Peter Fleming argues that they are closer than you might think. The quest to rid society of bureaucracy, shrink government and burn red tape has certainly made capitalism more human but not in the family friendly way envisaged by free market gurus. Increasing informality has led to a capitalism fuelled by limitless exploitation and increasingly seedy methods of management from semi feudal workplace hazing rituals and predatory middle managers with an axe to grind to arbitrary zero hours contracts. Uber and perhaps worst of all the compulsory gym session with your boss. Fleming dubs this Sugar Daddy Capitalism after the controversial dating app wealthy businessmen use to meet young girls most of whom are struggling with university fees. What seems like a creepy outlier is actually a prescient metaphor for our whole economy: an anonymous and impersonal cash system that is also intent on getting under your skin extra close and capable of ruining everything if you say no.

Aether A Journal of Strategic Airpower Spacepower Major General Charles A Willoughby served as Douglas MacArthur's stalwart chief intelligence officer G 2 for over a decade throughout World War II and the Korean War This first full biography examines Willoughby's shadowy origins in his native Germany his curious arrival in the United States and his military service in World War I as well as his work during the interwar years as a junior diplomat budding historian and neophyte intelligence officer His chance encounter with MacArthur in the mid 1930s would prove to be the genesis of a near symbiotic relationship between the two with significant consequences for both Throughout his life Willoughby identified with strong authoritarian leaders notably Franco and especially MacArthur The author also assesses Willoughby's performance as a professional intelligence officer both in World War II and Korea where he is often vilified for his inaccurate assessments of enemy strength and most likely courses of action as well as his sycophantic relationship with his commander Willoughby is most often criticized for his failing to foresee the entry of Chinese forces into the Korean War and its impact upon the US Army and the prosecution of the war Following MacArthur's removal by President Truman in 1951 Willoughby retired and spent the rest of his days engaged in right wing political activity and in staunchly defending his much maligned boss The legacy he left is one filled with lingering and important questions about loyalty to superiors in civilian as well as military environments how far that loyalty should extend and walking the tightrope involved in telling truth to power
