The Handbook of the Telegraph. Being a Manual of Telegraphy, Telegraph Clerks' remembrancer and Guide to Candidates for Employment in the Telegraph Service, Etc R. BOND (of London.), 1873      A Handbook on Currency and Wealth George Burnside Waldron, 1896      Railway Signaling , 1926      Lawyering for the Railroad William G. Thomas III, 1999-10-01

Lawyering for the Railroad provides the first full account of railroad monopoly power tracing its sources and effects in the southern political economy. Issues touching on railroad development were major components of politics in the days of both Populism and Progressivism and railroad attorneys often in their role as lobbyists were always in the middle of the action. They distributed free passes to legislators, retained the best counsel for their clients, laid out the legal agreements to form monopolies and instituted practices to ensure quick and favorable settlements for the railroads. In this intriguing work William G. Thomas introduces the southern attorneys who represented railroads between 1880 and 1916, closely examining their role in the political economy of the South during the Gilded Age and the Progressive Era, a period in which the region experienced sharp change, explosive growth and heated political contests. Thomas tells his fascinating story with legal department records from some of the largest interstate railroad companies in the South. With the help of these records, he demonstrates how the railroads tried to use the law and the legal process to mold the southern political economy to their ends and what kind of opposition they faced. Standing at the crossroads of business law and politics, Lawyering for the Railroad gives context, depth and specificity to what have been cursory glimpses into the shady world of corporate power in the Gilded Age. From small town lawyers to big city firms, the story of the railroad attorneys brings into focus the many ways the interstate railroad transformed the South.

Political Power and Colonial Development in British Central Africa 1938-1960s Alan Cousins, 2022-12-30

This book focuses on the late colonial history of Zambia and Malawi, which between 1953 and 1963 were part of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. Although there were many links in their history and between their populations, the two territories, British protectorates under Colonial Office control, contrasted greatly in power structures, in their economies and in their development. Europeans living in Northern Rhodesia, with a power base in the mining economy, were able to establish a dominant position in the territory after the Second World War. By the 1950s it looked as though they would have, with Southern Rhodesian Europeans, a long hegemony, gaining independence from Britain as a new Dominion, which would mean control over both Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland through the Federation. Thus, white ethnicity and ideology are essential factors in this book relating to the struggle for power from just before the Second World War up to the 1960s. However, crises in 1959 and 1960 led to the collapse of the Federation. A second focus is on issues of social and economic development. For Africans in Nyasaland and in rural parts of Northern Rhodesia, there was a relatively weak economy in this period, a pattern of limited cash crop production while many people became caught up in labour migration subordinate to powerful European-dominated economic forces within southern Africa. This meant that colonial policies aimed at rural development were fundamentally flawed The book also looks at the actual nature of rural economic change as opposed to colonial policies and discusses alternative visions of the future which were put forward The argument is put that historians have often concentrated on the activities of the main nationalist movements in Nyasaland and Northern Rhodesia seeing them as bringing progress away from colonialism and towards independence Here there is an attempt to draw out the complexities of life and a variety of responses in the colonial situation progress coming in a number of forms but not always being achieved
