Progress Cameron Muir,2014-06-05 Food and the global agricultural system has become one of the defining public concerns of the twenty first century Ecological disorder and inequity is at the heart of our food system This thoughtful and confronting book tells the story of how the development of modern agriculture promised ecological and social stability but instead descended into dysfunction Contributing to knowledge in environmental cultural and agricultural histories it explores how people have tried to live in the aftermath of ecological imperialism The Broken Promise of Agricultural Progress An environmental history journeys to the dry inland plains of Australia where European ideas and agricultural technologies clashed with a volatile and taunting country that resisted attempts to subdue and transform it for the supply of global markets Its wide ranging narrative puts gritty local detail in its global context to tell the story of how cultural anxieties about civilisation population and race shaped agriculture in the twentieth century It ranges from isolated experiment farms to nutrition science at the League of Nations from local landholders to high profile moral crusaders including an Australian apricot grower who met Franklin D Roosevelt and almost fed the world This book will be useful to undergraduates and postgraduates on courses examining international comparisons of nineteenth and twentieth century agriculture and courses studying colonial development and settler societies It will also appeal to food concerned general readers The Broken

Promise of Global Advocacy Marcel Hanegraaff,Arlo Poletti,2022-06-27 The Broken Promise of Global Advocacy addresses two key normative debates associated with the rise of transnational advocacy whether global interest communities are biased in favor of wealthier countries and whether the growth of global advocacy implies the emergence of a global civil society truly representative of global constituencies The authors address these important debates using original data drawn from a large scale project which maps all organized interests participating in two international venues the World Trade Organizations Ministerial Conferences 1995 2017 and the United Nations Climate Summits 1997 2017 They leverage this unique dataset to carry out a systematic empirical assessment of contending views on the factors driving the rise of transnational advocacy In doing so the book demonstrates that cross national differences in global interest representation largely mirror states economic power and that global interest communities are likely to remain dominated by organizations representing national rather than global interests This book will be of great interest to students and scholars working in
