Brooks,2009-08-01 Between the early 1900s and the late 1950s the attitudes of white Californians toward their Asian American neighbors evolved from outright hostility to relative acceptance Charlotte Brooks examines this transformation through the lens of California s urban housing markets arguing that the perceived foreignness of Asian Americans which initially stranded them in segregated areas eventually facilitated their integration into neighborhoods that rejected other minorities Against the backdrop of cold war efforts to win Asian hearts and minds whites who saw little difference between Asians and Asian Americans increasingly advocated the latter group s access to middle class life and the residential areas that went with it But as they transformed Asian Americans into a model minority whites purposefully ignored the long backstory of Chinese and Japanese Americans early and largely failed attempts to participate in public and private housing programs As Brooks tells this multifaceted story she draws on a broad range of sources in multiple languages giving voice to an array of community leaders journalists activists and homeowners and insightfully conveying the complexity of racialized housing in a multiracial society

Black Neighbors Elisabeth Lasch-Quinn,2017-10-06 Professing a policy of cultural and social integration the American settlement house movement made early progress in helping immigrants adjust to life in American cities However when African Americans migrating from the rural South in the early twentieth century began to replace white immigrants in settlement environs most houses failed to redirect their efforts toward their new neighbors Nationally the movement did not take a concerted stand on the issue of race until after World War II In Black Neighbors Elisabeth Lasch Quinn analyzes this reluctance of the mainstream settlement house movement to extend its programs to African American communities which she argues were assisted instead by a variety of alternative organizations Lasch Quinn recasts the traditional definitions periods and regional divisions of settlement work and uncovers a vast settlement movement among African Americans By placing community work conducted by the YWCA black women s clubs religious missions southern industrial schools and other organizations within the settlement tradition she highlights their significance as well as the mainstream movement s failure to recognize the enormous potential in alliances with these groups Her analysis fundamentally revises our understanding of the role that race has played in American social reform
