protein aggregates and bioenergetics defects have been described in most if not all neurodegenerative disease To counterbalance these noxious stimuli cells deploy at least during the initial pathogenic states intrinsic neuroprotective responses These are general compensatory mechanisms common to several neurodegenerative conditions which reprogram cellular physiology to overcome stress Adaptation includes strategies to optimize energetic resources for instance reduction of rRNA synthesis to repress translation suppression of transcription and bioenergetics and metabolic redesign Additional mechanisms include potentiation of antioxidant capacity induction of endoplasmic reticulum ER stress and activation of protein quality control systems and autophagy Ineffective execution of these compensatory strategies severely threatens cellular homeostasis and favors onset of pathology Therefore a better understanding of these buffering mechanisms and of their interconnections may help to devise more effective therapeutic tools to prolong neuronal survival and activity independently of the original genetic mutations and stress insults This Research Topic focuses on the initial compensatory responses protecting against failure of those mechanisms that sustain neuronal survival and activity The collection intends to summarize the state of the art in this field and to propose novel research contributes with the ultimate goal of inspiring innovative studies aimed to contrast progression of neurodegenerative diseases
