

COM Objects and Collections

In addition to user-defined Class Objects and VBScript Objects and Collections, there are many different COM Objects (and Object Collections) and other system objects based on COM technology that are accessible from VBScript. These Objects include:

- ActiveX Controls inserted on an IWS Screen (via Insert OCX tool)
- ActiveX Controls instantiated via VBScript
- ADO DB and ADOX Objects and Collections
- Microsoft Office OLE Automation (Word, Excel, Access, Outlook & Components)
- WMI
- WSH
- WSDL
- XML DOM

ActiveX Controls Inserted On An IWS Screen

InduSoft Web Studio (IWS) serves as an ActiveX control container, which is a parent program that supplies the environment for an ActiveX control to run. Through the IWS development interface (insert OCX tool), one or more ActiveX controls can be added to a screen. The OCX (ActiveX Control) must first be registered, if it was not already done so as part of the installation of the ActiveX control. IWS provides a Register Controls tool (under Tools on the toolbar) to allow registration of ActiveX controls, and to verify if a control has already been registered.

After the OCX is inserted on the screen, IWS will assign the control a name. This name can be changed in the Object Properties dialog box, accessed by double clicking on the control in the IWS development environment, but the name of the control must be unique from any other control used by the current IWS application. In the Object Properties dialog box, the Configuration button will provide access to the Properties, Methods and Events accessible for this ActiveX control. In the Configuration dialog box, there is a tab for Events, which allow for the execution of a VBScript code segment if an Event is triggered for the ActiveX control. In the Properties and Methods tabs, parameters, triggers, IWS tags, etc. can be tied to the various Properties and Methods.
