Barriers to Bioweapons Sonia Ben Ouagrham-Gormley, 2014-12-15 In both the popular imagination and among lawmakers and national security experts there exists the belief that with sufficient motivation and material resources states or terrorist groups can produce bioweapons easily cheaply and successfully In Barriers to Bioweapons Sonia Ben Ouagrham Gormley challenges this perception by showing that bioweapons development is a difficult protracted and expensive endeavor rarely achieving the expected results whatever the magnitude of investment Her findings are based on extensive interviews she conducted with former U S and Soviet era bioweapons scientists and on careful analysis of archival data and other historical documents related to various state and terrorist bioweapons programs Bioweapons development relies on living organisms that are sensitive to their environment and handling conditions and therefore behave unpredictably These features place a greater premium on specialized knowledge Ben Ouagrham Gormley posits that lack of access to such intellectual capital constitutes the greatest barrier to the making of bioweapons She integrates theories drawn from economics the sociology of science organization and management with her empirical research The resulting theoretical framework rests on the idea that the pace and success of a bioweapons development program can be measured by its ability to ensure the creation and transfer of scientific and technical knowledge The specific organizational managerial social political and economic conditions necessary for success are difficult to achieve particularly in covert programs where the need to prevent detection imposes managerial and organizational conditions that conflict with knowledge production

Classifying Drinking Water Contaminants for Regulatory Consideration National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Water Science and Technology Board, Committee on Drinking Water Contaminants, 2001-09-01 Americans drink many gallons of tap water every day but many of them question the safety of tap water every day as well. In fact, devices have been created to filter tap water directly before reaching cups. It's true, however, that the provision and management of safe drinking water throughout the United States have seen triumphs in public health since the beginning of the 20th century. Although advances in water treatment, source water protection efforts, and the presence of local state and federal regulatory protection have developed over the years, water in the United States still contains chemical, microbiological, and other types of contaminants at detectable and at times harmful levels. This, in addition to the growth of microbial pathogens that can resist traditional water treatment practices, has led to the question: Where and how should the U.S. government focus its attention and limited resources to ensure safe drinking water supplies for the future? To deal with these issues, the Safe Drinking Water Act (SDWA) Amendments of 1996 included a request that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) publish a list of unregulated chemical and microbial contaminants and contaminant groups every five years that are or could pose risks in the drinking water of public water systems. The first list, called the Drinking Water Contaminant Candidate List (CCL), was published in March 1998. The main function of the CCL is to provide the basis for deciding whether to regulate at least five new contaminants from the CCL every five years. However, since additional research and monitoring need to be conducted for most of the contaminants on the 1998 CCL, the list is also used to prioritize these related activities. Classifying Drinking Water Contaminants for Regulatory Consideration is the third report by the Committee on Drinking Water Contaminants with the purpose of providing advice regarding the setting of priorities among drinking water contaminants in order to identify those contaminants that pose the greatest threats to public health. The committee is comprised of 14 volunteer experts in water treatment, engineering, toxicology, public health, epidemiology, water and analytical chemistry, risk assessment, risk communication, public water system operations, and microbiology and is jointly overseen by the National Research Council's (NRC's) Water Science and Technology Board and Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology. In this report, the committee needed to readdress its second report as well as explore the feasibility of developing and using mechanisms for identifying emerging microbial pathogens for research and regulatory activities. The promotion of public health remains the guiding principle of the committee's recommendations and conclusions in this report.
