Question 1

Suppose that the set $D = \{3, 7, 9, x\}$, where x is some real number, has the property that its median is equal to its mean. What are all possible values for the median?

- I) 8 only
- II) 6 and 8
- III) 5, 6, and 8
- IV) 5 and 8

Answer Explanation

In order to make the median equal the mean, we need to make the set symmetric. One way to do this is to let $x = 5$, which results in a median of 6. Alternatively, we could let $x = 1$, leaving a gap of 2 between 1 and 3 to mirror the gap of 2 between 7 and 9. This results in a median of 5. Similarly, we could let $x = 13$, leaving a gap of 4 between 9 and 13 to mirror the gap of 4 between 3 and 7. This results in a median of 8.

Question 2

Which of the following statements about scatter plots are true?

- I) Scatter plots are appropriate for bivariate data in which one or both variables are numerical.
- II) The variable plotted on the vertical axis is the explanatory variable, while the variable plotted on the horizontal axis is the response variable.
- III) Scatter plots can demonstrate an association, but not causation, between two variables.

Answer Explanation

Scatter plots can demonstrate an association between numerical variables, but never a causal relationship. Scatter plots are only appropriate for bivariate data in which both variables are numerical, not when one or both variables are categorical. The explanatory variable is the one plotted on the horizontal axis, while the response variable is the one on the vertical axis.
