Heitz, Patrick Simen, 2016-02-18 Everyone is familiar with the speed accuracy trade off SAT To make good choices we need to balance the conflicting demands of fast and accurate decision making After all hasty decisions often lead to poor choices but accurate decisions may be useless if they take too long This notion is intuitive because it reflects a fundamental aspect of cognition not only do we deliberate over the evidence for decisions but we can control that deliberative process This control raises many questions for the study of choice behaviour and executive function For example how do we figure out the appropriate balance between speed and accuracy on a given task How do we impose that balance on our decisions and what is its neural basis Researchers have addressed these and related questions for decades using a variety of methods and offering answers at different levels of abstraction Given this diverse methodology our aim is to provide a unified view of the SAT Extensive analysis of choice behaviour suggests that we make decisions by accumulating evidence until some criterion is reached Thus adjusting the criterion controls how long we accumulate evidence and therefore the speed and accuracy of decisions This simple framework provides the platform for our unified view In the pages that follow leading experts in decision neuroscience consider the history of SAT research strategies for determining the optimal balance between speed and accuracy conditions under which this seemingly ubiquitous phenomenon breaks down and the neural mechanisms that may implement the computations of our unifying framework

Neuropsychological Testing: From Psychometrics to Clinical Neuropsychology Alessio Facchin, Elisa Cavicchiolo, Edgar Chan, 2025-02-10 Neuropsychological testing represents an essential part of the clinical examination of neuropsychological patients and these measures remain the primary instrument for clinical research in neuropsychology For these reasons old procedures were psychometrically investigated to assess their metrical properties As a result of the redesigned procedures old tests were improved in terms of their psychometric properties and characteristics The field of neuropsychological testing needs to be updated with new research in order to improve the clinical practice of neuropsychological testing the psychometric characteristics of new neuropsychological tests and the theories behind the testing in a circular way In this research topic we want to report recent advances and changes from old standard diagnostic testing to more recent procedures and methods in the area of cognitive testing Applications comparisons novel definitions and measures updated procedures and psychometric properties of existing instruments measurement invariance reliability repeatability specific norms particular applications and use in specific patients are all welcome Open access tests methods and procedures are encouraged together with studies that follow the Open Science initiative This topic joins two different backgrounds in this area of research psychometrics and neuropsychology and all studies in these areas will be considered included reviews and meta analyses

The Psychology of Reading Mildred C. Robeck,Randall R. Wallace,2017-11-06 The need to know why as well as how children and youth respond as they do to reading instruction has guided the selection of this book s content The second edition of this title originally published in 1990 has retained and elaborated upon the three major themes previously presented that reading is a linguistic process that motivation the affective domain may be as important in learning to read as the cognitive domain and that the reality of learning theory is to be found in the mechanisms of the brain where information is mediated and memory traces are stored The text integrates views from cognitive psychology psycholinguistics and neuropsychology as they relate to reading and writing A learning motivation model is provided to present associative learning conceptualization and self directed reading in a hierarchical relationship with distinct cognitive and affective components The distinction between beginning and proficient reading is maintained throughout the text
