

ENGINE LUBRICATION

The oil pump is of a forced type, and mounted on top of the crankshaft. It is driven by a belt from the crankshaft pulley. Oil is drawn up through a pickup in the oil pan, and is forced through a filter to the main oil gallery. It is then distributed to the various parts of the engine.

The filter is of the spin-on type, and is mounted on the side of the engine. It is designed to catch any dirt or debris that may be in the oil. The filter is replaced when the oil is changed. The oil is then distributed to the various parts of the engine.

In addition to the oil pump, there are other lubrication systems on the engine, such as the water pump, which is driven by a belt from the crankshaft pulley. It is designed to circulate coolant through the engine and radiator.

The oil level should be checked at intervals. The oil should be changed at intervals of 3,000 miles, or 3 months, whichever comes first. The oil should be changed when the oil is dirty or when the oil level is low.
