Toxic Lights Of Peril Book English Edition:

The Oxford Anthology of Roman Literature Peter E. Knox, J. C. McKeown, 2013-10-31 Though the wonders of ancient Roman culture continue to attract interest across the disciplines it is difficult to find a lively accessible collection of the full range of the era's literature in English. The Oxford Anthology of Roman Literature provides a general introduction to the literature of the Roman empire at its zenith between the second century BC and the second century AD. Two features of this extraordinarily fertile period in literary achievement as evidenced by this anthology are immediately and repeatedly clear: how similar the Romans' view of the world was to our own and perhaps even more obviously how different it was. Most of the authors included in the anthology wrote in Latin but as the anthology moves forward in time relevant Greek texts that reflect the cultural diversity of Roman literary life are also included, something no other such anthology has done in the past. Roman literature was wonderfully creative and diverse and the texts in this volume were chosen from a broad range of genres: drama, epic, philosophy, satire, lyric poetry, love poetry. By its very nature an anthology can abbreviate and thus obscure the most attractive features of even a masterpiece so the two editors have not only selected texts that capture the essence of the respective authors but also have included accompanying introductions and afterwords that will guide the reader in pursuing further reading. The presentations of the selections are enlivened with illustrations that locate the works within the contexts of the world in which they were written and enjoyed. The student and general reader will come away from this learned yet entertaining anthology with a fuller appreciation of the place occupied by literature in the Roman world.

Ashes to Ashes Richard Kluger, 2010-05-26 PULITZER PRIZE WINNER No book before this one has rendered the story of cigarettes mankind's most common self-destructive instrument and its most profitable consumer product with such sweep and enlivening detail. A great battleship of a book, formidable, majestic. The New York Times Book Review. Here for the first time in a story full of the complexities and contradictions of human nature, all the strands of the historical process—financial, social, psychological, medical, political, and legal—are woven together in a riveting narrative. The key characters are the top corporate executives, public health investigators, and antismoking activists who have clashed ever more stridently as Americans debate whether smoking should be closely regulated as a major health menace. We see tobacco spread rapidly from its aboriginal sources in the New World 500 years ago as it becomes increasingly viewed by some as sinful and some as alluring and by government as a windfall source of tax revenue. With the arrival of the cigarette in the late nineteenth century, smoking changes from a luxury and occasional pastime to an everyday, to some indispensable, habit, aided markedly by the exuberance of the tobacco huskers. This free enterprise success saga grows shadowed from the middle of this century as science begins to understand the cigarette's toxicity. Ironically, the more detailed and persuasive the findings by medical investigators, the more cigarette makers prosper by seeming to modify their product with filters and reduced dosages of tar and nicotine. We see the tobacco manufacturers come under intensifying assault as a rogue industry for knowingly and callously plying their hazardous wares while insisting that the health charges against them remain unproven and barely understood, so smokers indulge at their own risk. Among the eye-opening disclosures here are outrageous pseudo-scientific claims made for cigarettes throughout the 30s and 40s and the story of how the tobacco industry and the National Cancer Institute spent millions to develop a safer cigarette that was never brought to market. Dealing with an emotional subject that has generated more heat than light, this book is a dispassionate tour de force that examines the nature of the companies' culpability, the complicity of society as a whole, and the shaky moral ground claimed by smokers who are now demanding recompense.

Seeing Justice Mary Angela Bock, 2021-07-01 In Seeing Justice, Mary Angela Bock studies the way the American criminal justice system is visually represented in news. Going behind the scenes, she examines the way visual journalists negotiate with police and court officials to cover the criminal justice system and how officials endeavour to create favourable narratives by controlling what the public sees.

Changing Our Minds Naomi Fisher, 2021-02-04 Children are born full of curiosity, eager to participate in the world. They learn as they live with enthusiasm and joy. Then we send them to school. We stop them from playing and actively exploring their interests, telling them it's more important to sit still and listen. The result is that for many children, their motivation to learn drops dramatically. The joy of the early years is replaced with apathy and anxiety. This is not inevitable. We are socialised to believe that schooling is synonymous with education, but it's only one approach. Self-directed education puts the child back in control of their learning. This enables children, including those diagnosed with special educational needs, to flourish in their own time and on their own.

terms It enables us to put wellbeing at the centre of education Changing Our Minds brings together research theory and practice on learning It includes interviews with influential thinkers in the field of self directed education and examples from families alongside practical advice This essential guide will give you an understanding of why self directed education makes sense how it works and what to do to put it into action yourself
