

Experiment 1: Newton's Second Law

What happens when a force is applied to an object?

Introduction

Many objects around us are subject to forces. Forces cause objects to change in motion. In this experiment, we will study the relationship between force and motion. We will use a force sensor and a motion sensor to measure the acceleration of a cart as it moves down an inclined plane. The acceleration of the cart is proportional to the net force acting on it. This relationship is known as Newton's Second Law. Newton's Second Law states that the acceleration of an object is directly proportional to the net force acting on it and inversely proportional to its mass. The equation for Newton's Second Law is  $F = ma$ , where  $F$  is the net force,  $m$  is the mass, and  $a$  is the acceleration.

Equipment

$$F = ma$$

Procedure: www.phy.brocku.ca/phys101/Experiment\_1/1a.pdf with the force and motion sensors.

1. Take some time and familiarize yourself with the equipment. Check the force sensor range and the motion sensor range.
2. Perform the experiment for various masses and accelerations.
3. Take the data and calculate the acceleration. Check the data for any outliers.
