Global University Rankings and the Mediatization of Higher Education Michelle Stack, 2016-04-12 Higher Education Institutions simultaneously critique and participate in national and international rankings of universities. However, this creates a difficult situation since if universities do participate in rankings they acquiesce to a system based in media logics that has little to do with academic norms of research. If they do not participate in the rankings they risk losing public funding, students and donors in an increasingly competitive and globalized environment. This book delves into the influence of journalists, business tycoons and multinational corporations in defining what world class is and how it will be measured. Rankings provide us with a rich study for understanding how universities define, deploy and manage their assets and liabilities in a mediatized globalized economy.

The Strategic Repositioning of Arts, Culture and Heritage in the 21st Century George Mugovhani, Owen Seda, 2018-06-11 The post millennium world has been experiencing several recognisable historical milestones with regard to arts, culture and heritage. One of these has been the resuscitation and revival of creative elements of the arts, culture and heritage of previously marginalised or disadvantaged communities around the world. Until recently there had been scant regard and skewed allocation of resources for these, but lately attempts have been made to promote and sustain them in order to enable the socio-economic aspirations of a multicultural society. The contributions brought together here are the product of papers that were presented during a conference on Strategic Repositioning of Arts, Culture and Heritage in the 21st Century. They cover a broad spectrum of subjects such as indigeneity, music, song and identity politics, national reconciliation, education, product development and national development.

Artefacts of Writing Peter D. McDonald, 2017-10-11 Some forms of literature interfere with the workings of the literate brain, posing a challenge to readers of all kinds, including professional literary critics. In Artefacts of Writing, Peter D. McDonald argues they pose as much of a challenge to the way states conceptualise language, culture and community. Drawing on a wealth of evidence from Victorian scholarly disputes over the identity of the English language to the constitutional debates about its future in Ireland, India and South Africa, and from the quarrels over the idea of culture within the League of Nations in the interwar years to UNESCO's ongoing struggle to articulate a viable concept of diversity, McDonald brings together a large ensemble of legacy writers including T. S. Eliot, James Joyce and Rabindranath Tagore, putting them in dialogue with each other and with the policy makers who shaped the formation of modern states and the history of internationalist thought from the 1860s to the 1940s. In the second part of the book, he reflects on the continuing evolution of these dialogues, showing how a varied array of more contemporary writers from Amit Chaudhuri, J. M. Coetzee and Salman Rushdie to Antjie Krog, Arvind Krishna Mehrotra and Es'kia Mphahlele cast new light on a range of questions concerning education, literacy, human rights, translation, indigenous knowledge and cultural diversity that have preoccupied UNESCO since 1945. At once a novel contribution to institutional and intellectual history and an innovative exercise in literary and philosophical analysis, Artefacts of Writing affords a unique perspective on literature's place at the centre of some of the most fraught often lethal public controversies that defined the long twentieth century and that continue to haunt us today
