Community-based adaptation Hannah Reid, 2017-10-02 Community based adaptation CBA to climate change is based on local priorities needs knowledge and capacities Early CBA initiatives were generally implemented by non government organisations NGOs and operated primarily at the local level Many used bottom up participatory processes to identify the climate change problem and appropriate responses Small localised stand alone initiatives are insufficient to address the scale of challenges climate change will bring however The causes of vulnerability such as market or service access or good governance also often operate beyond the project level Larger organisations and national governments have therefore started to implement broader CBA programmes which provide opportunities to scale up responses and integrate CBA into higher levels of policy and planning This book shows that it is possible for CBA to remain centred on local priorities but not necessarily limited to work implemented at the local level Some chapters address the issue of mainstreaming CBA into government policy and planning processes or into city or sectoral level plans e g on agriculture Others look at how gender and children s issues should be mainstreamed into adaptation planning itself and others describe how tools can be applied and finance delivered for effective mainstreaming This book was published as a special issue of Climate and Development

Transforming Urban Food Systems in Secondary Cities in Africa Liam Riley,Jonathan Crush,2022-11-02 Countries across Africa are rapidly transitioning from rural to urban societies The UN projects that 60% of people living in Africa will be in urban areas by 2050 with the urban population on the continent tripling over the next 50 years The challenge of building inclusive and sustainable cities in the context of rapid urbanization is arguably the critical development issue of the 21st Century and creating food secure cities is key to promoting health prosperity equity and ecological sustainability The expansion of Africa s urban population is taking place largely in secondary cities these are broadly defined as cities with fewer than half a million people that are not national political or economic centres The implications of secondary urbanization have recently been described by the Cities Alliance as a real knowledge gap requiring much additional research not least because it poses new intellectual challenges for academic researchers and governance challenges for policy makers International researchers coming from multiple points of view including food studies urban studies and sustainability studies are starting to heed the call for further research into the implications for food security of rapidly growing secondary cities in Africa This book will combine this research and feature comparable case studies intersecting trends and shed light on broad concepts including governance sustainability health economic development and inclusivity This is an open access book
