1. According to the customs of the nineteenth century, what was a woman's true calling in life?
to provide a moral upbringing for her children and to furnish her husband with a warm and nurturing home
2. The beliefs about women and their place in society in the late 1800s fostered discrimination against them. Give four examples of how women were discriminated against.

- Women were barred from voting.
- Women had no property rights once they got married.
- Most women could not attend college.
- Women who worked received low pay and few opportunities.

3. What happened in the decades following the Civil War that helped prepare women for the women's suffrage movement to come?

Women's lives began to change. They started attending college and joining the work force. They formed religious and charitable organizations, as well as literary societies and arts clubs. They planned and carried out projects, elected their own officers, wrote reports, and spoke in public.

4. Complete the following table:

Group	Founders/Leaders	Philosophy/Strategy(ies)
National Woman Suffrage Association (NWSA)	Elizabeth Cady Stanton Susan B. Anthony	• barred men from membership • radical (newspaper was called The Revolution) • called for the immediate passage of a federal law granting women full voting rights
American Woman Suffrage Association (AWSA)	Lucy Stone Julia Ward Howe	• welcomed men as members • sought to gain female suffrage at the state—rather than the national—level • appealed to more conservative women

5. Who became the leader of the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA) in 1916, and what approach did she take to further the organization's goals?
Carrie Chapman Catt; her approach was a highly flexible, state-by-state strategy in which she delegated tasks to each of the organization's state affiliates
6. In what part of the country did the suffrage campaign achieve its first major victory? Explain why.
in the West; The line dividing women's and men's spheres in the West was not as sharply defined as in other parts of the nation. Women joined their husbands in working amid the rough frontier conditions; this made it difficult to justify depriving them of the vote. Western territories and states also used suffrage as a means of attracting more female settlers.
