Understanding Developmental Dyslexia: Linking Perceptual and Cognitive Deficits to Reading Processes Pierluigi Zoccolotti,Peter F. de Jong,Donatella Spinelli,2016-06-24 Understanding the mechanisms responsible for developmental dyslexia DD is a key challenge for researchers A large literature mostly concerned with learning to read in opaque orthographies emphasizes phonological interpretations of the disturbance Other approaches focused on the visual perceptual aspects of orthographic coding Recently this perspective was supported by imaging data showing that individuals with DD have hypo activation in occipitotemporal areas a finding common to both transparent and opaque orthographies Nevertheless it is difficult to infer causal relationships from activation data Accommodating these findings within the cognitive architecture of reading processes is still an open issue This is a general problem which is present in much of the literature For example several studies investigating the perceptual and cognitive abilities that distinguish groups of children with and without DD failed to provide explicit links with the reading process Thus several areas of investigation e.g acoustic deficits or magnocellular deficiencies have been plagued by replication failures Furthermore much research has neglected the possible contribution of comorbid symptoms By contrast it is now well established that developmental disorders present a large spectrum of homotopic and heterotopic comorbidities that make causal interpretations problematic This has led to the idea that the etiology of learning difficulties is multifactorial thus challenging the traditional models of DD Recent genetic studies provide information on the multiple risk factors that contribute to the genesis of the disturbance Another critical issue in DD is that much of the research has been conducted in English speaking individuals However English is a highly irregular orthography and doubts have been raised on the appropriateness of automatically extending interpretations based on English to other more regular orthographies By contrast important information can be gotten from systematic comparisons across languages Thus the distinction between regular and irregular orthographies is another potentially fruitful area of investigation Overall in spite of much research current interpretations seem unable to integrate all available findings Some proposals focus on the cognitive description of the reading profile and explicitly ignore the distal causes of the disturbance Others propose visual acoustic or phonological mech anisms but fail to link them to the pattern of reading impairment present in different children The present Research Topic brings together studies based on different methodological approaches i e behavioural studies examining cognitive and psycholinguistic factors eye movement investigations biological markers neuroimaging and genetic studies involving dyslexic groups with and without comorbid symptoms and in different orthographies transparent and opaque to identify the mechanisms underlying DD The RT does not focus on a single model or theory of dyslexia but rather brings together different approaches and ideas which we feel are fruitful for a deeper understanding developmental dyslexia

Physical Activity, Self-Regulation, and Executive Control Across the Lifespan Sean P. Mullen, Peter Hall, 2016-02-05 There is overwhelming evidence linking increased physical activity with positive changes in cognitive functioning and brain health Much of what we know about these interrelationships comes from aerobic exercise training studies with older adults and children This literature has paved the way for the neuroscientific investigation of mechanisms responsible for exercise induced cognitive and brain health enhancement a list that ranges from molecular changes to systemic changes in executive control and neural connectivity A new perspective has also emerged that aims to understand executive control processes that may underlie the regulation of health behavior In accordance with this view physical activity falls under the umbrella of health behaviors that require a substantial amount of executive control Executive control is a limited resource and the aging process depletes this resource People who regularly exercise are said to have higher self regulatory control planning goal shielding and impulse control than irregular exercisers The successful maintenance of physical activity participation in lieu of daily cognitive stressors likely reflects an adaptive resistance to control failures Indeed a handful of studies have shown the relationship between greater executive control and subsequently higher levels of physical activity However little is known about the neural correlates of physical activity adherence or sedentary behavior with the view that neurocognitive factors have an antecedent and reciprocal influence on these behaviors No research has focused on the brain networks responsible for the self regulation of physical activity which likely overlaps with structures and functions playing critical roles in the regulation of other health behaviors Interdisciplinary investigations are needed to explain the extent to which physical activity self regulation and self regulatory failure is dependent upon or under the influence of executive control processes and brain networks Understanding the degree to which self regulatory resources may be enhanced restored and trained will have enormous implications for basic science and applied fields It is also of great import to understand whether or not physical activity self regulation is a domain specific behavior associated with specific brain networks or to determine the extent to which regulatory network sharing occurs The aim of this Frontiers Research Topic is to curate contributions from researchers in social and cognitive neurosciences and related fields whose work involves the study of physical activity behavior self regulation and executive control For this Research Topic we therefore solicit reviews original research articles and opinion papers which draw theoretical or empirical connections related to sustained physical activity behavior self regulatory strategies cognitive performance and brain structure and function While focusing on work in the neurosciences this Research Topic also welcomes contributions in the form of behavioral studies psychophysiological investigations and methodological innovations This Frontiers Research Topic will carve out new directions for the fields of exercise cognitive and social neurosciences We hope you will consider submitting your work
