CHAPTER I: Overview of Campus Journalism

1. Introduction to Journalism

Campus Journalism Act of 1991 Approved on July 5, 1991, the Campus Journalism Act or CJA seeks to "uphold and protect the freedom of the press even at the campus level," as stated in the law's Section 2 (Declaration of Policy). The law also aims to "promote the development and growth of campus journalism as a means of strengthening ethical values, encouraging critical and creative thinking, and developing moral character and personal discipline of the Filipino youth (Sec. 2)." The law states that it is optional at the tertiary level. At the elementary and high school levels, the duly appointed faculty adviser is even part of the editorial board (Sec. 3d, Editorial Board). Nevertheless, the campus publication has a say in the selection of its faculty adviser. According to Sec. 6 (Publication Adviser), he or she "shall be selected by the school administration from a list of recommendees submitted by the publication staff." The function of publication adviser is limited to technical guidance (Sec. 6), and that he or she should not interfere with the contents of the campus publication. From an editorial standpoint, technical guidance refers to nuances in media production like checking the grammar of articles and ensuring adherence to professional standards when it comes to the design and layout of the pages. His or her role is limited because autonomy should be given to campus publications.

The CJA, after all, recognizes that "a student publication is published by the student body through an editorial board and publication staff composed of students selected by fair and competitive examinations (Sec. 4, Student Publication)." It adds, "Once the publication is established, its editorial board shall freely determine its editorial policies and manage the publication's funds (Sec. 4)." From this provision, it is clear that the law seeks to uphold the editorial independence of campus publications. This independence is defined not only in terms of editorial content but also in terms of day-to-day operations, particularly fund management. The law explicitly states, "In no instance shall the Department of Education, Culture and Sports or the school administration withhold the release of funds sourced from the savings of the appropriations of the respective schools and other sources intended for student publication. Subscription fees collected by the school administration shall be released automatically to the student publication concerned (Sec. 5, Funding of Student Publication)." 2.

History of Campus Journalism in the Philippines High School Publication- A Brief History The school paper is so much part of a student's life that he seldom considers how many student writers and how much cooperation and technical skill are necessary, before he receives from them the latest news, comment, feature stories and literary articles promptly. In the city schools of Manila, at least six issues a year, or one per grading period, is put out by selected staff members in both elementary and high schools. High school student publications are almost as
