

The Urinary System

The urinary system is responsible for filtering waste from the blood, maintaining fluid balance, and regulating blood pressure. It consists of the kidneys, ureters, bladder, and urethra.

The kidneys are located in the upper back, on either side of the spine. They are bean-shaped organs that filter blood and produce urine. The ureters are tubes that carry urine from the kidneys to the bladder.

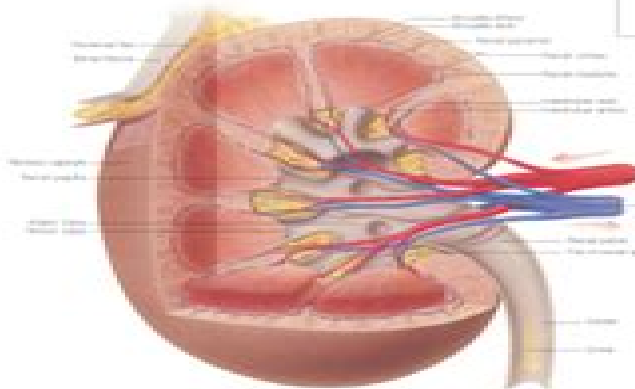

The bladder is a sac-like organ that stores urine until it is ready to be expelled from the body. The urethra is the tube that carries urine from the bladder out of the body.

Structure of the kidneys

The kidneys are located in the upper back, on either side of the spine. They are bean-shaped organs that filter blood and produce urine. The ureters are tubes that carry urine from the kidneys to the bladder.

Functions of the kidneys

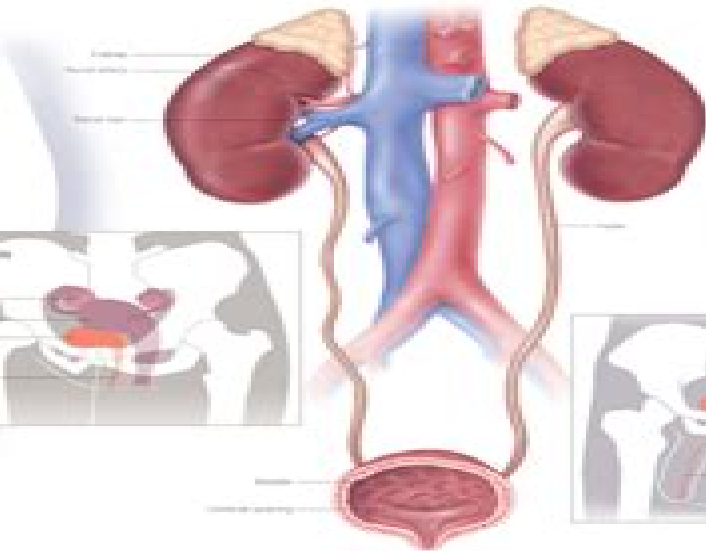

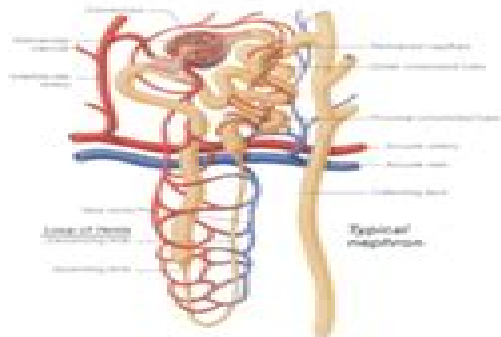

The kidneys have several functions, including filtering waste from the blood, maintaining fluid balance, and regulating blood pressure. They also produce hormones that help regulate the body's metabolism.

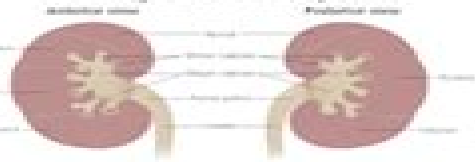

The nephron

The nephron is the basic functional unit of the kidney. It is responsible for filtering blood and producing urine. Each kidney contains about a million nephrons.

The nephron consists of a renal corpuscle, which is made up of a glomerulus (a cluster of capillaries) and a Bowman's capsule. The filtrate from the glomerulus passes through a series of tubules, where water and electrolytes are reabsorbed and waste is excreted.

Filtrate formation

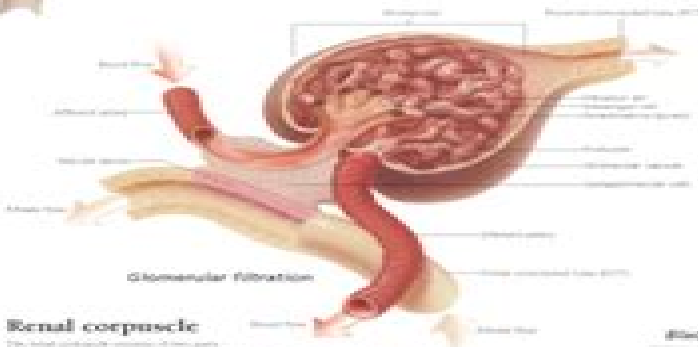

How urine is produced

The kidneys produce about 1.5 liters of urine each day. This process involves filtering blood and removing waste products. The filtrate then passes through the tubules, where water and electrolytes are reabsorbed and waste is excreted.

Key stages of urine formation

- Glomerular filtration: Filtering of water, waste products, and electrolytes from the blood.
- Tubular reabsorption: Reabsorption of water and electrolytes from the filtrate back into the blood.
- Tubular secretion: Secretion of waste products from the blood into the filtrate.

Renal corpuscle

The renal corpuscle is the part of the kidney where filtration occurs.

It consists of a glomerulus (a cluster of capillaries) and a Bowman's capsule. The filtrate from the glomerulus passes through a series of tubules, where water and electrolytes are reabsorbed and waste is excreted.

The glomerulus is a cluster of capillaries where blood is filtered. The filtrate then passes through a series of tubules, where water and electrolytes are reabsorbed and waste is excreted.
