Discussion: While reported rates of self-harm in the community have risen greatly since the 1970s, reported rates among the young remain relatively stable. However, the young who self-harm are more likely to be female, have a history of mental health problems, and be in contact with mental health services. The results of this research also indicate that the majority of self-harmers are young females with a history of mental health problems.

Abstract. This study examined the relationship between the use of the Internet and the use of other information sources. The study was conducted in a sample of 1,000 adults. The results showed that the use of the Internet was positively related to the use of other information sources. The study also found that the use of the Internet was related to the use of other information sources in a non-linear fashion. The study has implications for the use of the Internet in the workplace.
