The vestibular system is responsible for maintaining balance and spatial orientation. It consists of the utricle, saccule, and three semicircular canals. The utricle and saccule contain otoliths, which are small, dense structures that help the brain determine the body's position relative to gravity. The semicircular canals contain fluid and are responsible for detecting rotational movement. The vestibular system works in conjunction with the visual system and the proprioceptive system to provide a sense of balance and spatial orientation.
