NOTE: The average number of publications per year for the top authors of the most frequently published articles is 1.07, suggesting that the average researcher is involved in one or two publications.

Abstract

1. Disconnect power to the receptacle of the service panel.
2. Remove the center wire from the mating contacts. Remove plate and wire secured by the mounting screws included with the surge protector.
3. Remove the mounting screw from over the surge protector with a screw that fits the opening.
4. Plug surge protector into the top receptacle of the metal outlet, keep the wire(s) to allow coverage of the unused receptacle and secure with the center mounting screw provided. Replace the screw hole cover.
5. Reinstall cover of the service panel.
6. Plug any electronic equipment is turned off before plugging into the surge protector outlet. Do not use electronic or air conditioning equipment on the surge protector.
7. Examine equipment for any information.

NOTE: It is the intent that the protection against unauthorized access is a secure storage of the protection components (e.g., the secret key) in permanently installed devices in the cellular infrastructure for protection for your electronic equipment. At the same time, the user interface for the activation of the protection is not permanently installed.

A glowing blue "Glowmeter" indicator light shows that your surge protector is plugged into a grounded "receptacle" and that your surge protector's internal protection components are providing protection from ground surges. If the "Glowmeter" indicator light stops glowing, it is possible that the surge protector is grounded incorrectly, or perhaps that the wiring in your home is not properly grounded.
