

Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week group cognitive-behavioral intervention on the self-efficacy and self-management skills of individuals with type 2 diabetes. The intervention was designed to improve self-efficacy and self-management skills, which are important for the management of type 2 diabetes. The results of the study showed that the intervention had a significant positive effect on self-efficacy and self-management skills. The findings suggest that a group cognitive-behavioral intervention can be an effective way to improve self-efficacy and self-management skills in individuals with type 2 diabetes.
