

The Break in

BACKGROUND

In the early morning hours of Saturday, June 17, 1972, Frank Wills discovered a piece of tape over a basement-door lock in the Watergate apartment and office complex in Washington, D.C. Wills, a night watchman at the complex, removed the tape and left to get a cup of coffee. When he returned less than an hour later, he found the same lock had been retaped, so he called police.

Plainclothes officers responded to the call, and they soon confronted five burglars in the offices of the Democratic National Committee on the sixth floor of the building. The burglars wore business suits and thin rubber gloves, and they carried cameras, film, a walkie-talkie, lock, picks, electronic surveillance equipment, and stacks of hundred-dollar bills. Although they offered fake identifications at first, it was soon discovered that they worked for the Committee to Re-Elect the President, popularly known as CREEP. They were in the Watergate complex to install electronic bugging equipment in telephones that would have transmitted Democratic campaign strategy back to CREEP.

Most newspapers downplayed or ignored the initial story of the break-in, but the Washington Post ran a story on the front page of its Sunday edition. The Post's story was written by Bob Woodward, who with his colleague Carl Bernstein, soon began an in-depth investigation of the curious circumstances surrounding the Watergate burglary.

In response to the story, John Mitchell, President Nixon's campaign manager, denied that the burglary was part of a spying operation by the president's men. Ronald Ziegler, the president's press secretary, said, "I am not going to comment on a third-rate alleged burglary attempt." And, within days of the break-in, President Nixon himself denied the White House had been involved.
