• The two most important factors in determining a company's ability to attract, develop, and retain talent are the quality of its people and the quality of its people's work environment. The quality of a company's people is determined by the quality of its hiring process, the quality of its training and development programs, and the quality of its compensation and benefits programs. The quality of a company's people's work environment is determined by the quality of its physical work environment, the quality of its social work environment, and the quality of its psychological work environment.

The company's gross income for the 1999-2000 season (around 100,000) was around 100,000, which was around 100,000. The company's gross income for the 1999-2000 season (around 100,000) was around 100,000.
