Buying Time Kaz Makabe, 2017-03-07 WE KNOW from repeated failures to predict and prevent catastrophes ranging from the Great Tohoku Earthquake to the global financial crisis of 2008 that complex adaptive systems such as those found in nature or in economies are actually very hard to predict much less influence Today we face environmental degradation caused in large part by the use of fossil fuels ever declining efficiencies in extracting them a pace of development for renewable energy insufficient for replacement of the fossil fuels we are burning through and population growth that is likely to add two billion people globally by 2045 Despite partial recovery since the financial crisis of 2008 growth remains sluggish and large budget deficits persist across much of the developed world Meanwhile developing states face their own challenges stemming from unbalanced growth Against this backdrop and in light of the urgent need to pay closer heed to our environment the last thing

the world needs is an energy crisis triggered not merely by recurrent scares over supply but by more lasting structural changes in our ability to use fossil fuels with reckless abandon Buying Time applies lessons learned the hard way from the global economic crisis of the past decade to offer an overview of the state of the environment and our energy future Grounded in subtle thinking about complex systems including the economy energy and the environment this book underscores the connections linking them all Kaz Makabe is a veteran financial systems expert who lived through the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear disaster He nevertheless concludes that nuclear energy is the bridge than can help us cross over the abyss we face

Gale,2019-03-01 Keeping the economy strong will require addressing two distinct but related problems Steadily rising federal debt makes it harder to grow our economy boost our living standards respond to wars or recessions address social needs and maintain our role as a global leader At the same time we have let critical investments lag and left many people behind even as overall prosperity has grown In Fiscal Therapy William Gale a leading authority on how federal tax and budget policy affects the economy provides a trenchant discussion of the challenges posed by the imbalances between spending and revenue America is facing a gradual decline as debt accumulates and delay raises the costs of action But there is hope fiscal responsibility aligns with both conservative and liberal goals and citizens of all stripes can support the notion of making life better for our children and grandchildren Gale provides a plan to make the economy and nation stronger one that controls entitlement spending but preserves and enhances their anti poverty and social insurance roles increases public investments on human and physical capital and raises and reforms taxes to pay for government services in a fair and efficient way What is needed he argues is to balance today s needs against tomorrow s obligations We face significant fiscal challenges but if we are wise enough to seize our opportunities we can strengthen our economy increase opportunity reduce inequality and build better lives for our children and grandchildren We do not have to kill popular programs or starve government Indeed one main goal of fiscal reform is to maintain the vital functions that government provides We need to act responsibly pay for the government we want and shape that government in ways that serve us best

Born on Third Base Chuck

Collins,2016-09-23 A call to action for America s wealthy and a warning shot across the bows of their yachts if they fail to act Born on Third Base offers a clear and compelling case for why the privileged and powerful must act to reverse widening inequality of income wealth and political power in America Robert B Reich former US Secretary of Labor author of Saving Capitalism An essential piece of reading for anyone concerned by the increasing wealth inequality made worse by the global pandemic and political partisanship The growing wealth inequality continues to dominate headlines The divide between the haves and have nots in America is increasingly political and tensions are rising On one side the wealthy wield power and advantage keeping the system operating in their favor all while retreating into enclaves that separate them further and further from the poor and working class On the other side those who find it increasingly difficult to keep up or get ahead are desperate and frustrated waging a rhetorical war against the rich and letting anger and resentment keep us from seeing new potential solutions But can we suspend both class wars long enough to consider a new way forward Is it really good for anyone that most of society's wealth is pooling at the very top of the wealth ladder Does anyone including the one percent really want to live in a society plagued by economic apartheid It is time to think differently says longtime inequality expert and activist Chuck Collins Born into the one percent Collins gave away his inheritance at 26 and spent the next three decades mobilizing against inequality He uses his perspective from both sides of the divide to deliver a new narrative Collins calls for a ceasefire and invites the wealthy to come back home investing themselves and their wealth in struggling communities And he asks the non wealthy to build alliances with the one percent and others at the top of the wealth ladder Stories told along the way explore the roots of advantage show how taxpayers subsidize the wealthy and reveal how charity used incorrectly can actually reinforce extreme inequality Readers meet pioneers who are crossing the divide to work together in new ways including residents in the author's own Boston area neighborhood who have launched some of the most interesting community transition efforts in the nation In the end Collins's national and local solutions not only challenge inequality but also respond to climate change and offer an unexpected fresh take on one of our most intransigent problems

Politics and Climate Change: A History Andy May, 2022-09-04 These are stories of the political corruption of science Politicians work to forge a consensus they use persuasion intimidation and avoid or suppress debate Debating an issue leads to education it shows the question is more complex than it appears it makes the public consider all sides

Education leads to caution not action The politician wants a decision he wants action so no debate Once the consensus is formed the public votes laws are passed regulations issued the minority concedes and conflict is avoided Science is not a belief It exists to challenge the consensus view It is how one person can show the overwhelming majority is mistaken Scientists do not vote they debate They gather facts make observations and analyze the data and try to show the consensus opinion is wrong Politicians and scientists don't mix They are like fire and water opposites But what about when no one trusts the politician and he must have a scientist for back up What happens when the government becomes the sole source of research money We address the attempt by politicians to control scientific research and research outcomes They do this by selectively funding projects that look for potential disasters ideally global disasters People love disaster stories journalists love disaster stories scientists love to be quoted in newspapers and on television If you frighten people enough they will give up their rights for security increasing government power So it is not surprising that as government has taken over funding scientific research scientists have migrated from research that helps people to researching possible catastrophes no matter how remote the possibility Science has devolved from improving human lives to developing plots for disaster movies

Bilateral Aid Peter Blunt, 2022-12-23 The social and economic consequences of the COVID 19 pandemic and of extreme climate events have brought into sharp relief the serious deficiencies of our political economies The dominant global ideology of neoliberalism and its architects and beneficiaries are responsible for this Bilateral development assistance is an integral part of the neoliberal grand design However while the deficiencies of neoliberalism have been starkly exposed by the pandemic its collapse is unlikely in the short term Much bilateral assistance will therefore continue to be self serving Within these confines and on the basis of a sharply critical analysis of the functioning of technical assistance at the point of the design and delivery of programmes and projects this book identifies crucial supply side nodes of power and influence where feasible and relatively straight forward functional reforms strategy structure selection training would make genuinely developmental results for recipients more likely and enhance donor interests at the same time It argues that more authentic empathetic and altruistic technical assistance will be essential to bringing this about The arguments are supported by primary published evidence gathered by the author during 18 years of full time employment as a team leader or programme manager of technical assistance programmes The book will be of interest to students of development management development economics political economy and international relations as well as policy makers development practitioners and supply and demand side government officials Assessing Surprises and Nonlinearities in Greenhouse Warming Joel
