governments are starting to directly measure the subjective wellbeing of their citizens and to use it for policy evaluation and appraisal What would happen if a country were to move from using GDP to using subjective wellbeing as the primary metric for measuring economic and societal progress Would policy priorities change Would we continue to care about economic growth What role would different government institutions play in such a scenario And most importantly how could this be implemented in daily practice for example in policy evaluations and appraisals of government analysts or in political agenda setting at the top level This volume provides answers to these questions from a conceptual to technical level by showing how direct measures of subjective wellbeing can be used for policy evaluation and appraisal either complementary in the short run or even entirely in the long run It gives a brief history of the idea that governments should care about the happiness of their citizens provides theories makes suggestions for direct measurement derives technical standards and makes suggestions on how to conduct wellbeing cost effectiveness and cost benefit analyses and gives examples of how real world policy evaluations and appraisals would change if they were based on subjective wellbeing In doing so it serves the growing interest of governments as well as non governmental and international organisations in how to put subjective wellbeing metrics into policy practice
