

Paper 5: Argumentative Research Paper

The research proposal should allow you to understand the complexities of a topic that you feel is worth further exploration. Now you'll use that research to write a thoughtful and persuasive final paper.

As the culminating paper of this course, the argumentative research paper is your chance to pull together all of your learning over the course of the semester. Now that you've learned how to appreciate rhetorical strategies, summarize and analyze others' ideas, transfer concepts into new situations, and write evidence-based paragraphs, this paper is your chance to use all of those skills to persuade other people to take a stand on the issue or to change their stand on that issue. You should present a clearly arguable thesis, backed by credible, sufficient and fully analyzed evidence.

Key Features of a Researched Argument

1. A clear and arguable position. At the heart of every argument is a claim with which people may reasonably disagree. Some claims are not arguable because they're completely subjective, matters of taste or opinion, because they are a matter of fact, or because they are based on belief or faith. To be arguable, a position must reflect one of at least two points of view, making reasoned argument necessary.
2. Necessary background information. Sometimes we need to provide some background on a topic we are arguing so that readers can understand what is being argued.
3. Good reasons. By itself, a position does not make an argument; the argument comes when a writer offers reasons to back the position up.
4. Convincing evidence. It's one thing to give reasons for your position. You then need to offer evidence for your reasons. The evidence you use to support your argument will come from
