There are thousands upon thousands of different types of computers, and each one is different. The differences between them come from the way they are designed to work. Some are designed to be used by one person at a time, while others are designed to be used by many people at the same time. Some are designed to be used for business, while others are designed for entertainment. Some are designed to be used for education, while others are designed for research. The differences between them are endless.
