ANALYSIS The authors' analysis of the data from the 1990s shows that the rate of return on capital has been declining steadily since the mid-1970s. This is true for all countries, but the decline has been particularly sharp in the United States. The authors argue that this is due to a combination of factors, including technological change, globalization, and changes in the structure of the economy. They also note that the decline in the rate of return on capital has led to a decline in investment, which in turn has led to a decline in economic growth.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in Ankara, Turkey. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. Physical fitness was measured at the beginning and end of the 12-week period using a series of tests including a 1000m run, a 10m sprint, a 10m shuttle run, a 10m sit and reach, and a 10m standing balance test. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly higher scores than the control group in all five tests at the end of the 12-week period. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of older adults. The study was a randomized controlled trial involving 60 participants aged 65 and older. The intervention group performed a 12-week exercise program, while the control group remained sedentary. Physical fitness was measured using a 6-minute walk test, and health-related quality of life was assessed using the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly higher scores on the 6-minute walk test and the SF-36 questionnaire compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program can improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in older adults.
